KILLING OF TERRY.

The country had a sensation yesterday in the announcement of the killing of Judge Terry by Marshal Nagle. No one will be concerned at the death of Terry; he met a deserved fate. He was a man of vice and violence. He was the notorious slayer of Broderick in the earlier days of California, when men were very reckless in pushing aside those who crossed their interests or ambition. Of late years he came into notoriety in connection with the woman with whom he lived in the relation of wife, whom he had married in the State of New York. He was a man of vice and violence. He was the notorious slayer of Broderick in the earlier days of California, when men were very reckless in pushing aside those who crossed their interests or ambition. Of late years he came into notoriety in connection with the woman with whom he lived in the relation of wife, whom he had married in the State of New York.

Such remarkable growth, however, is not without its dangers. The material of progress had to be sought abroad and introduced. The coal and the iron were not at the doors of Knoxville, neither was the wood of the timber. The way had to be opened for them.

We, here, occupy a position not inferior to that of Knoxville in relation to the natural sources of supply of the raw material for manufactures. The iron is not farther off, the coal is only a little more distant, the wood surrounds us. All that remains is to stretch out more arms in other directions for inlets and outlets. The conditions for prosperity will then be no more fictitious for Asheville than they had been for Knoxville. The former will have all the facilities of the latter as a railroad center. It has already achieved a wide distinction throughout the country as a health and pleasure resort, with some strong suggestions to see business men as a place in which large future might be safely allied with present sentiment. There is assigned to the city a future of great promise. It is a city of the future, and it will continue to grow as a health and pleasure resort. It is the wise policy of the men of Asheville to combine these business and pleasure features, and doing so, to make a solid foundation for the future.

More railroads, more factories, and then the growth and strength of Asheville will be more remarkable even than that of Knoxville.

THE RIGHT WAY TO VIEW IT.

Speaking of the loss of, or great injury to, the corn crop in the great grain country of the West, by high water and the overflow caused by the non-completion of the Black creek canal, begun with a view to drain the surplus waters into the Pungo lake, but never finished, the News-Observer says:

We are not of those who think it well to be constantly recognizing lines between the East and West. We look over the whole State. Every part of it is a part of the South. We rejoice with every community that attains a desired object, and we sympathize with any part of our people whose situation demands relief.

This is the just sentiment of a wise man. The adherence to sectional feeling, the selfish fostering of sectional interests and measures, have been vastly detrimental to the interests of North Carolina. All its parts are bound in political bonds they cannot break if they would. It is therefore the part of wisdom to eradicate as far as possible those antagonisms which diverse topographical features and industrial pursuits have created, and to blend and harmonize them into one great common interest. This can be done only by a liberal and enlightened view, and a knowledge of the capacities and needs of the several parts of the State. When once understood, to the eye of patriotism and intelligence they present themselves, not as hostile to each other, but as so many varied sources of strength, wealth and State pride. Each part of the State must come to the help of the other to supplement the needs of one part out of the abundance of the other. Each in turn needs the help of the other. The West must call upon the East to aid it in the construction of its railroads and its turnpikes, the vital essentials of its prosperity. The East must call upon the West to help it dig its canals and erect the drainage of its swamps. The mutual help thus given adds greatly to the prosperity of each of the sections so aided. But it also adds vastly to the aggregate prosperity of the whole State, and this is the aim to which the eye of wise and patriotic legislation must be directed.

Death of an Old Lady.

Murphy Advertiser.
On last Saturday night the oldest lady, in all probability in the State, passed peacefully away. Mrs. Boston, more familiarly known as Granny Boston, passed away last Saturday night at 10 o'clock, at her home on Valley river. She was buried in the Western cemetery Sunday afternoon.

She herself did not know her exact age, but from the best information we could get, it was thought she was born in 1798, which would make her age at the time of her death 121 years. She told our informant that she was quite a large girl and distinctly remembered seeing the soldiers drill, while in rendezvous near King's mountain, and she could narrate many incidents of the Revolutionary war, of which she was yet a pensioner. She was very diminutive, and was scarce anything but skin and bones, and we are told that the corpse, had it been weighed would not have reached more than fifty pounds. She died very peacefully and without pain. Her death is attributed to old age.

Dr. Parker Prays cream Van-Oh, Roseline, Ongeline and Diamond and powder having now become the ladies' favorites, at F. L. Jacob's drug store, these popular manikere articles may always be found, together with pocket mirror, board, orange wood sticks, nail scissors, files and other such requisites. Also a complete line of drugs and toilet articles, in addition to the Hebe Soda Fountain from which ice cold drinks are dispensed. Corner Main street and Patton avenue.

At the close of the war, or say twenty-five years ago, Knoxville had a population considerably less than Asheville has now. It probably contained about 6,000 people. It now contains about 45,000, and is steadily increasing. What has wrought the change?

Knoxville had some natural advantages Asheville does not possess. It is in a comparatively open and very fertile country, productive in all the cereals, and well adapted to the raising of cattle, horses and hogs on a large scale. It is also situated in convenient proximity to mines of coal, iron, lime and other indu-

Notice to Travelers.

Beginning to-day, and continuing until further notice, a street car will leave Court House Square at 15 minutes before 8 o'clock, a. m., for the train for Spartanburg. All their values transported to the train free of charge. All who take the regular "depot" or "train" car, which will leave the Square at 8 o'clock a. m., as usual, will be charged 5 cents for each case and large bundle. This car also connects with the Spartanburg train, but if all persons take it, there will not be time enough for all to get their tickets and check, and many may be left, while if as many as can will take the car leaving the Square at 15 minutes before 8, they will not only save the extra charge for values on the "depot" car, but have ample time for their check and tickets.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ONE YEAR AGO.

The finest and best equipped Drug Store in North Carolina was opened in Asheville by T. C. Smith & Co.—After eighteen years of prosperity in the wholesale and retail drug business at Charlotte, they sold out and moved to Asheville, where they secured the best and handsomest store room in the city—fitted up in style, with all the latest appliances and conveniences possessed by other modern drug stores.—Twelve months have passed since this venture was made—they find the outlook far ahead of their expectations—business growing larger monthly, having already reached a solid basis.—Their success demonstrates what Asheville will do, for those who come here with "the know how."—Prescriptions and general business have poured into this New Drug Store until necessity compels the employment of a large force of thoroughly competent clerks.—This new firm do not want the earth, only a small part of it.—They are entering the second year of their business career with new snap, large stock, ample raw cash to make large additions, big trade already established, a successful past and a bright future.—These facts show what can be done for those who have a well grounded faith in the commercial importance of our growing city—for those who have the nerve to burn all the bridges behind them, and give proper attention to their business.—The people are kindly asked to continue their favors to this prosperous and busy drug store, where every article sold is warranted as represented, or purchase money refunded.
