DEATH INTERVENED.

A Young Woman Whose Four Accepted. A strange story printed in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat caused considerable commotion in the southern end of that city, where the lady in question resided quite awhile.

The story was told by a clergyman of the Episcopal church, who has been a sufferer from the lady's strange fate. The lady in question is but a visitor to America, whence she came to try and shake off a spell of which she firmly believes she is the victim.

When but 17 years old she became strongly attached to a nephew of the bishop of Carlyle. One day, while riding across the heath in his company, she had a presentiment that he would propose that night and that she accepted.

She saw him, in a momentary vision, lying, pale and cold, by the roadside. Bewildered, she involuntarily stopped her horse, and in another moment fell in a swoon.

She awoke, and found herself in a cottage near by, and on her recovery the beautiful young man's love had been so intensified by anxiety that, in a moment of mutual tenderness, they were betrothed.

On recovering she said she had seen, in a vision, the hall room suddenly transformed into a submarine cavern, containing nothing but the corpse of her accepted betrothed.

The lady recovered, and eighteen months afterward she was betrothed to an English naval officer, who was suddenly ordered to the West Indies to join H. M. S. schooner Eurydice.

The next spring, on the return of the ship home, she was wrecked, and all aboard but two were lost. The young lover was not one of the saved.

Time healed the lady's twice wounded heart, and her affections were won by an English army officer, who was drowned shortly after the betrothal.

The night he was drowned she was attending a ball, and according to her statement, she was seized with a sudden attack of dizziness and fainted.
