Gutreau's Curse.

Washington Special in Chicago Times. The death of policeman Kearney, the officer who arrested Gutreau just after he had shot President Garfield, brings up once more "Gutreau's curse." The superstitious find much food for morbid imaginings in the fate which has befallen so many of the chief actors in that tragical affair. It must have been an impartial or too comprehensive curse, for while Geo. B. Corkhill, the prosecuting attorney, and Judge Porter, his assistant, are both dead, poor Charley Reed, who defended him, after attempting suicide by jumping from a ferry boat into North River, is in an insane asylum in New Jersey, and Scoville, Gutreau's brother-in-law, who assisted in the defense is divorced from his wife and is little better than a legal wreck. However, Judge Cox, who presided at the trial and sentenced the assassin, is hale and hearty, sound of body and mind, and is just now wrestling with the mysteries of the Butler Strong case.

Bridal and Holidays.

The new goods in solid silver, plated ware and fine porcelain and glass at Law's stores, opposite postoffice, are worthy of attention. All are asked to visit this store.
