Mr. Hampton addressed the senate He referred to a sentence in Ingalis' speech which cast a serious imputation upon him, that he (Hampton) deliberupon him, that he (Hampton) actor-ately advocated the policy of extermina-tion of the blacks. Mr. Hampton read a newspaper extract on which Ingalis based that statement, and declared that there was not a word in that extract which warranted the construction put upon it by that senator. He would willmon it by that senator. He would will-ingly submit that proposition to any im-partial, fair-minded man, who understood the English language. He would even leave it to the fairness of the distinguished senator from Kausas himself, if his auswer was not to be given in the senate, but in a court of justice, where he would be bound by his oath to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. The senator had an undoubted right to use a newspaper paragraph when he thought to injure a political op-ponent, but by no such methods. HOUSE.—The galleries of the house were crowded to their utmost capacity, long before moon to-day by spectacors anticipating the resumption of the contest yesterday, nor were they disappointed; for as the clerk read the journal in the usual manner, omitting the detailed vote by yeas and nays on the question of consideration against the contested election case, Mr. Breekenridge, of Kentucky, rose and demanded the reading of the full vote. After a moment's hesitation the speaker directed this to be done. This having been completed, Mr. Breekenridge demanded the reading of the full vote. After a moment's hesitation the speaker directed this to be done. This having been completed, Mr. Breekenridge demanded the reading of the names of those not voting and the speaker ordered this to be done also. Then Mr. Springer, of Illinois, demanded the reading in full of the statement of speaker Reed, giving the grounds for his ruling yesterday, and the clerk proceeded to read accordingly.
