ADVERTISING RATES—Reasonable, and made known on application at this office. All transient advertisements must be paid in advance.

The CITIZEN is the most extensively circulated and widely read newspaper in Western North Carolina.

Its discussion of public men and measures is in the interest of public integrity, honest government, and prosperous industry, and it knows no personal allegiance in treating public issues.

The CITIZEN publishes the dispatches of the Associated Press, which now covers the whole world in its scope. It has other facilities of advanced journalism for gathering news from all quarters, with everything carefully edited to occupy the smallest space.

Specimen copies of any edition will be sent free to any one sending their address.

Reading notices ten cents per line. Obituary, marriage and society notices fifty cents each (not exceeding ten lines) or fifty cents per inch.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1890.

In its comments upon what it calls the Florida election frauds, the Springfield Republican justifies the commission of one wrong because it alleges another has been committed. It charges, on republican authority, that in the last presidential election a large number of republican votes were thrown out, or had been kept off the election books by democratic supervisors. This is the republican charge. It may be false, or it may be true. If the latter, it ought to find no defenders. It can find none in good morals. It may find them in the force of bad example and the principle of retaliation for persistent practice of reprehensible party methods. And if true, rebuke comes with bad grace from a paper that straightway finds justification for a palpable violation of plain statutes governing elections. That violation did not stoop to the slow and secret processes of deceit. It flew at once at the throat of law and justice with the full confidence of being sustained.

The Republican gets at its case of justification in this way: Judge Swaine, a yet unconfirmed federal judge, avowed his purpose to prosecute all offenders against the election law. He and Marshal Mizell, whom the Springfield Republican styles "an active republican and a perfectly fearless officer," resolved that it would be useless to prosecute the democratic election officers unless the juries were "overwhelmingly" republican. The jurors in Florida are drawn from a box in which are placed 300 names, deposited there by the clerk of the court, and a commissioner appointed by the judge, who must be of the party opposed to the clerk. The clerk, Walter, was a republican, and the judge appointed one Farrell, a quasi democrat, but without the confidence of his party. These men were to draw alternately from the box, presumably one of each party. In fact, the drawing was so contrived, that out of twenty-three of the grand jury, twenty-two were republicans, and out of the petit jury, the republicans outnumbered the democrats ten to one. This is the statement, not of a democrat, but of the Springfield Republican.

Then says the Republican:

Sheriff Mizell then took steps to complete the packing of the jury with republicans, as appears from the following letter submitted in court in a prosecution of one Chaires and others for violating the election law:—

C. C. Kirk, Esq., De Land, Fla:—

Sir: You will at once confer with Mr. Bielby and make out a list of fifty or sixty names of true and tried republicans from your county registration list for jurors in the United States court, and forward same to Hon. P. Walter, clerk United States court, and it is necessary to have them at once, as you can see. Please acknowledge this. I am, yours truly,

JOHN R. MIZELL,
United States Marshal.

Please get the names of the parties as near steamboat and railroad stations as possible.

On the trials that followed Judge Swaine refused to admit the letter, which plainly exposed the plot to convict the accused; and the Republican accepts the explanation of a Florida correspondent of the N. Y. Tribune that "the marshal had nothing whatever to do with such drawing"; a contemptible quibble, suitable enough for the Tribune, but we had thought out of place in the Republican. Practically, the marshal engineered and directed the whole scheme.

But since the times when the presidency was stolen for Hayes and bought for Harrison, we see so much of that kind of villainy that nothing surprises us except the defence of it by men, in private or general public relations, fair and honest.

Amid all the trash, the nonsense, the falsehoods, the ignorance, the malignity which finds its way to some of the Northern papers, there is found a stronger current of sense and truth and candor and generosity determined to assert itself and resist the purpose of eternal alienation, misunderstanding and hostility which many have devoted themselves to bring about. It is not pleasant to notice what these malcontents or malignants write; it is sometimes a duty to do so. But it is at all times pleasant to hear pleasant words, not because they flatter, but because they indicate good, generous feeling as well as good sense.

Recently there was an excursion of two hundred or more Northern men to the new town of Fort Payne, Ala. They were welcomed by Col. J. S. Spaulding, president of the Fort Payne Coal and Iron company, himself a Northern man. We quote the following from his address:

"We folks who came here almost a year ago, have learned much from the Southern people. We have found them more agreeable than we are. They are more gentle in their manners and more polished in society. They have softer voices, and are not so much after money-making as we yankees are. They have been a great help to us in building up this city, and while we have been a help to them in many respects, they have taught us some valuable lessons. The enterprising men of this immediate vicinity have joined hands with us, and all of us together, Northern as well as Southern men, have accomplished what you see in Fort Payne. We have no political or sectional differences. We are getting along harmoniously together."

All of which it is pleasant to hear. Many Northern people are with us. Many things are novel to them, and not like what they are accustomed to in all respects. But there is no friction, no hostility, no bad feeling, except with such as seclude themselves, and, like the scorpion under glass, sting themselves to death with their own malignity. What Col. Spaulding says expresses much the larger and happier experience.

A remarkable instance of self control, of heroic devotion, of suppression of all personal feeling, and abnegation of passion the most natural and excusable, was presented in Chester, S. C., in connection with a terrible incident occurring on the 16th. An old gentleman named Hood, aged 75, had been on a visit to one of his sons on Sunday evening and was returning home by himself at a somewhat late hour. It may have been about 9 o'clock, that two successive shots were heard somewhere along the course he must have taken. At 4 o'clock the next morning the dead body of the old gentleman was found riddled with shot. The evidence is positive that the assassin was a negro about 55 years old, inflamed with an insane jealousy of his wife, who had threatened to shoot any man who came near his house. He was arrested with a newly discharged double barreled gun in his possession. He was arrested and imprisoned. Besides his son the sheriff, he had two other sons, merchants in Chester. The excitement was very high, and there was imminent danger that the assassin would be taken from jail and lynched. It was in this emergency that duty to his office, rather than consideration for his dead father, displayed itself so nobly in Sheriff Hood. He telegraphed to the Governor of South Carolina at once of the danger of the lynching, calling for the immediate removal of the prisoner to a place of security; and the Governor responded at once by sending a company of soldiers to Chester, and having the prisoner taken to Columbia. In these times of quick violence and vengeful passions, history has made few records so fine and noble.

The Chicago Inter-Ocean says:

In the beautiful State of Kentucky, in the sun-kissed, sea-cooled Georgia, in picturesque, climate-blessed Tennessee, in Mississippi, and in Arkansas, incarnate fiends for years have been, and now are, employed in the practice of brutalities that are not equaled by the hideous crimes of the African slave traders.

This is the pleasant wooing to Southern influence to secure Chicago as the site for the World's Fair of 1892; this is the encouraging invitation to make close our business relations with Chicago; this is the friendly spirit which invites to closer social union. We know it is only one paper that speaks, perhaps only one pen that indites; but so long as the Inter-Ocean renews each morning its malignant diatribes, so long will we conclude that it has a large class of readers who delight in them, just as the hearers of that Boston reverend Joseph Cook hung with delight upon the foul outpourings of his venomous lips. But as we do not believe the people of Chicago are on the whole as bad as we might infer from the daily torrent of vice, dishonesty and violence poured out through the press upon the country as evidences of their domestic depravity and lawlessness, so the readers of the Inter-Ocean may entertain the same charity towards us and may not believe half they are told. But it is disreputable business for an influential journal to engage in, apparently, to delight in.

The Baltimore Sun good naturedly indulges in some badinage at the expense of Miss Susan B. Anthony, who has just celebrated her 70th birthday, and who took occasion to express her satisfaction that she had escaped the matrimonial noose. The Sun warns her not to triumph too soon; ladies have been known to marry long past her age. The Sun is too generous in its supposition. One would as soon think of searching among the rattling relics of the catacombs of Paris for a bride as to take her who has lived for seventy years engaged in unwomanly work, sowing firebrands, cultivating gall and wormwood, and unsexing heart and brain for the pleasures of notoriety. We may do her the justice, however, to say that probably she has advanced the cause of her sex by liberating the world from some of its prejudices against occupations once pronounced unsuitable to woman.

The Montana Thief.

The Silver Bow returns were the subject of another judicial investigation in Montana the other day, and they again showed a majority which would elect the democratic candidates for the legislature and make that body democratic on joint ballot. There were 122 registered voters in the disputed precinct. Of these 164 voted at the last election. Three persons voted the republican ticket, and their votes were returned as cast. The republicans, after the election, produced false affidavits to show that many more republicans voted, and on the strength of these affidavits the county returning board threw out the returns of the precinct in question, thus electing the republican county ticket. At the judicial hearing the other day the republicans could procure but 3 men who would say they had voted their ticket. Their affidavits as to others were shown to be false. The men that were said to have made them could not be found or traced. There was a complete breakdown of the case on which the theft of Montana was attempted. A committee of the senate at Washington has the matter now under consideration. It will do well to take some account of the facts.

Gratifying to All.

The high position attained and the universal acceptance and approval of the pleasant liquid fruit remedy Syrup of Figs, as the most excellent laxative known, illustrate the value of the qualities on which its success is based and are absolutely gratifying to the California Fig Syrup Company.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Looking Backward

Over the past eight years of our successful business life in Asheville has demonstrated to us the fact that our determination to sell only pure goods, guaranteeing weights and quality, and asking a small profit on everything sold, commends itself to the good sense of purchasers.

Second, That desirable customers cannot be gained by the oft-tried practice of some dealers in cutting prices on a few leading articles, hoping to make it up on something else.

That hard work and close application to business is the price of success.

That our businesss for 1889 shows an increase over the previous year of 20 per cent. which is very gratifying, and for which we wish to thank our many friends in Asheville and Western North Carolina.

Looking Forward

We are encouraged to enter upon the year before us with renewed energy and a determination to give our customers the benefit of our increased facilities for buying and selling the very finest goods to be had, at small profits.

Our stock is now the largest ever offered in this market and embraces everything in the line of Staple and Fancy Groceries, Table Delicacies, Fruits, Grain, Flour, etc.
