without debate.

Mr. Hoar remarked that Mr. Chaudler had said that his statement was as brief and compact as he could make it, and added that the rule left the matter entirely to the discretion of the senators.

Mr. Berry asked Mr. Chaudler whether he had himself prepared the statement he was making, or whether somebody else had done so.

Mr. Chandler realist that he had to be a some body else had done so.

Mr. Chandler replied that he had writ-

Mr. Chandler replied that he had written it himself.

Mr. Berry—I thought so. It is not a petition, but a collection of rot and filth which the senator has collected himself.

Mr. Chandler—It is a statement which I make on my own responsibility of the substance of this petition. It was prepared by myself. I do not wish to violate the rules of the senate. I am only sorry that the senator from Tennessee should not have taken occasion to comment on the practice of making full stateof citizens. Mr. Harris again called on the chair for a ruling.

The Vice President—A statement has bills passed, and at 2 o'clock the Blair the United States." educational bill was taken up as unfinished business.

Mr. Ingalls inquired as to the time when the bill was likely to be disposed of, remarking that it stood in the way of many important measures, and giving notice that he would insist that its con-sideration should proceed with dispatch. Mr. Blair said that the bill had been under consideration since the 5th of February and had been proceeded with as rapidly as the senate was willing to proceed with it. He was anxious to bring it to a conclusion as rapidly as possible. There was no more important measure before the senate. At least five or six senators had notified him of their seemed to show that the passage of the bill was not warranted by the constitution. It was not his purpose to again enter into a full discussion of the character and provisions of the bill, even if he had not before done so. A learned and able discussion of the subject by the senator from West Virginia, Mr. Franklin, and by his colleague, Mr. Coke, had made it necessary for him to do so. He should, therefore, limit his remarks to presenting some of the authorities which he had then used to show that there was certainly no express grant of power in the then used to show that there was certainly no express grant of power in the constitution for such legislation, and that the legislation as to local and domestic questions in the States was left exclusively to the States.

Mr. Wilson, of Maryland, also argued against the constitutionality of the bill.

Mr. Chaudler, from New Hampshire, had told the senate with great carnestness that if the constitution were constitutional, congress must be clothed ness that if the constitution were con-stitutional, congress must be clothed with the power of educating the people. Intelligence being bedrock, (as he argued) of the republican form of government, congress had to possess the power to in-stitute a system of schools, wholly with-out regard to State limits or State powers. He (Wilson) knew of no enunciation of any public man more at war with the popular traditions of the country or with the framework of the government.

Mr. Blair replied to some of the points made in Mr. Wilson's speech, and also in the speech of a few days ago of Mr. Faulkner. He referred to the newspaper report of an attempt being made in the State of Virginia to restrict the education of white children, leaving the money tion of white children, leaving the money raised from colored taxpayers to be used for colored schools, and he showed that under one of the sections of the bill no State that made any such restriction could derive any advantage from it.

Referring to the assertions as to the growing unpopularity of the bill, he gave it as his opinion that the bill was much stronger throughout the country to-day than it had been originally. He said that it has never been so strong among the masses of the people, especially among the masses of the white people of the South, as it was to-day. So it was, too, in the senate. The first time it had 33 votes in its favor, the second time 36 votes, the third time 39 votes, and the next time it would have more than 45 votes in its favor. That next time he said would be some day next week.

Mr. Blair went on with general remarks in explanation and defence of the bill and said that he did so because no other senator desired to speak upon it to-day.

Ferrall of Virginia. Mr. Rowell was sec-onded by Mr. Lacey of Iowa, and Mr. O'Perrall by Mr. Wilson of Missouri. All the speeches were confined to an analysis of the evidence, and were dry and uninteresting. The only life infused into the debate was contributed by Mr. Greenhalge of Mass. who, while address-ing himself to the evidence, did so with so much quiet sarcasm as to elicit laugh-ter and applause from both sides of the ter and applause from both sides of the house. His quiet reference to "the ex-treme leniency with which the speaker treats the other side of the house" was thoroughly enjoyed, and his humorous dissection of the minority report highly entertained the house. In conclusion he said: "While I do not believe that the gentl man from West Virginia (Mr. Pendleton) was duly elected to the seat he occupies, I take pleasure in saying at least, that not a page of this record calluding to the record page of this record talluding to the record in the case) is stained by any improper conduct on his part, and I take greater pleasure in saving that his conduct while in this house has been that of dignity of manhood and of courtesy. I say that it is a great pleasure if the bitterness of political warfare can be amcliorated by finding our enemies—the men we have to contest with—men of heroic and chivalric mould. Under these circumstances we have a right to love our enemies, and I thank our friend that he at least permitted me to know 'the herce joy which ted me to know 'the heree joy whiel warriors feel in forman worthy of thei

Mr. Chandler, ironically—I am very much obliged to the senator from Arkansas for the pleasure of being informed the that a petition on this subject can be presented in the senator of the United States with the consent of the States with the States with the consent of the States with the consent of t Hampshire, that the brief which he has prepared is a condensed statement of the petition. CINCINNATI, February 26.—All the elements of a disastrous flood in the Ohio river seem to be now present. Continuous wet weather has saturated the earth so that the excessive rainfalls of the past three or four days have all found their way to the river. Along the entire valley of the Ohio the rainfall has been enormous. From the Kentucky side, the Big Sandy river comes with a boom almost unparsalleled, while the Kanawha river further up also pours out a flood. The Scioto, Hearking and Muskingum in Ohio, as well as the two Miamis keep the river bed full, while a rise is also coming down from headwater.

The rise since 9 a. m. yesterday for twenty-four hours is over seven feet, and the guage now shows forty-nine feet six inches in the channel. About five feet more will interfere with railroad traffic and every inch after that will increase that trouble as well as cause elevation of great quantities of goods in all the bottom portions of the city. A flood is inevitable; its proportions depend on the weather of the next few days.
