FACTS AND COMMENTS.

A BILL providing for the American flags for all the public school houses of the State has been favorably reported by the New York legislature.

SENATOR STEWART, of Nevada, says that any other policy than the unlimited coinage of silver is a conspiracy on behalf of creditors to keep money as dear as possible.

DIAMONDS in the rough are to go on the free list. There will be nothing to hinder the poor laboring man from purchasing the raw material and polishing it up to suit himself.—Sprinfield Union.

"WHAT is McKinley's committee doing with the tariff bill?" asked a visitor at Washington of a Western republican congressman. "Making a devil of a lot of democrats," was the pithy and truthful answer.—Des Moines Leader.

GEN. JUBAL EARLY, one of the pet cavalry leaders of the Confederacy, lives at Lynchburg. He has a suite of rooms, fitted up with a fine library, choice oil paintings and handsome steel engravings, but boards around at different restaurants, paying for his meals as he goes and running up no bills.

SOME cranks are holding a meeting in Chicago to denounce Free Masonry. They attack it because it is a secret society, and in the next breath say they know all its secrets. The wonder is what comfort these people get out of this sort of thing to pay them for the trouble of going to Chicago.

THE growing popularity of electric street railways is illustrated in the case of St. Louis. Seven companies, with lines extending ninety-two miles, are at work equipping their roads with the overhead electric system.

THE proposal to retain a part of the soldier's pay for the first year as a safeguard against desertion should be described as a measure to prevent enlistment. Why not boldly face the evil as it exists, and compel the officers to treat enlisted men more like human beings? If that were done, there would be no need of paternalism in the matter of caring for the soldier's pay.

THE estimated cost of the consular service of the United States for the next year is $1,490,925. This is by no means a large amount. But then it does not include the labor lost, the trouble and the disappointment of the rejected applicants for consular positions. These disappointments cannot be measured in dollars and cents.

IN VIEW of the recent outrage on an American schooner by the Newfoundland authorities, and that the squadron of evolution will soon arrive from its foreign tour, would it not be well to set it to work by sending it to cruise in Canadian waters? Perhaps a sight of Uncle Sam's fists might keep the Bluenoses within the bounds of decency.

ACCORDING to the ruling of the law department at Washington, the United States government must pay for the return home of Chinamen smuggled into this country. This is bad for the country and good for the Chinamen. When John wants to go home under this ruling he needs but convince the government that he has no business here. Chinamen do not intend to stay here, and it is exactly to their liking to have their return passage paid. The law officers at Washington are kind.

ADULTERATED LARD.

Competition may be the life of trade, it is sometimes the death of fair dealing with the public. A recent example has been the renewal of the old fight between the makers of hog lard and of cottonseed oil lard. The former demand of congress a law requiring that every package of lard into which cottonseed oil has been worked be branded with a statement to that effect. The latter express their willingness to conform to such a law, but demand in their turn that packages of hog lard, when adulterated with other compounds, shall be duly branded. Much unsavory testimony as to the practices of the hog lard makers has been submitted to congress. Were it widely published, the consumers of animal fat would most likely cry with Mercutio, "A plague o' both your houses." There is evidence that lard made with cottonseed oil is much more wholesome, or perhaps it would be more to the point to say much less unwholsome, than is the hog lard of commerce, but there is still room for doubts as to its positive wholesomeness. Through this whole business the unwillingness of makers of either variety to tell the absolute truth about their products has been disgusting. The cottonseed oil men have put on the market thousands and thousands of gallons of their product, labelled "Pure olive oil," and when the fraud has been exposed the reply has been that cottonseed oil is as good as olive oil for the table. It is not, and the makers know it is not, and admitted that fact when they attached the lying label, else why should they have attempted the deception? They are making olive oil of the best quality in California, but the production is yet too small to supply the demand in that State, with the standing orders said to be sent from a few hotels and clubs in New York.

The agitation over the colors of soldiers' trousers has aroused Marshal MacMahon of France, who declares that red will not make as conspicuous a mark in battle as is said, for the reason, as he claims, that it is a color that is lost sight of at a comparatively short distance.

HE WANTS TO GO WEST.

CHIEF SMITH TALKS OF A POSSIBLE REMOVAL.

HE FAVORS THE TRIBE'S MOVING TO THE TERRITORY.

The Indians Never More Prosperous in Cherokee—Trouble Over an Indian School Master.

Chief Smith, who is at the head of the Cherokee Indians in North Carolina, came over with a number of members of his tribe to attend the present session of the federal court. They were witnesses in some trespass cases. Yesterday Judge Dick decided that his court had no jurisdiction in the contested questions, and the cases were dismissed. They will return to their home to-day.

Mr. Smith is far above the average Indian in intelligence, and his appearance is striking. As straight as an arrow his six feet of stature and solid build make his presence commanding. His black hair hangs in curls on his shoulders and a small moustache of the same color breaks the swarthy monotony of his face. He dresses modestly and well and looks every inch a chief. He is a fluent conversationalist, uses good English and shows that he has had the advantage of a liberal education. Before court opened this morning he stood in Court Place and talked of the condition of his tribe and of their probable future.

"It is my idea," he said, "that ultimately we will move to the Indian Territory where the other Cherokees are located. There is a strong feeling among my tribe that we would be bettered by the move. A large number are in favor of it. I do not know that half of them are, but the feeling is growing. I have tried to have them take some steps in the matter, and for myself I would like to go. Many things in this section are not to our liking.

"In 1886 I first began the agitation of the subject. It was immediately after we were defeated in the suit with the western Cherokees over the division of the proceeds of the sale of their lands. I came back from Washington when the suit had been decided, and on the advice of the Indian commissioner called a council to appoint a delegate to go west and see if it would be advisable for us to move there. There were a number of my enemies who saw an opportunity to cut me in this call and they at once began circulating the story that I had sold out the property of the tribe. They even went so far as to give the price. They said I had received $50,000. Many of my people believed it and for that reason no delegate was appointed. Since then I have been able to prove to them that I have remained true to their interests and now there is not one who believes that I had sold them out. At the same time the idea of moving has grown constantly and now many favor it.

"I have been thinking the matter over seriously," he said, "and have almost made up my mind to go. What I hear of the country is favorable and I think I would like it much better than this."

"And if you go," he was asked, "who will become chief of the North Carolina tribe?"

"If I go," he replied with dignity, "there will be no tribe here. The majority will go with me and all that will remain will be a few of the older members who have spent their lives in the mountains and want to end them there."

Everything on the reservation is moving along well, he said. The people were never in a more prosperous condition. They are doing a great deal of farming and are constantly buying the latest improved agricultural implements. Eighty children are attending the Indian school. The latter is now causing some trouble. Nine years ago he said the tribe had made a contract with an Indiana colony of Quakers to run the school for ten years, and a man named Sprague was sent to superintend it. For a few years Mr. Smith says all went well, but finally the new superintendent extended his jurisdiction until he attempted to make laws for the tribe. In the traditional history of the race Mr. Smith had never heard of a chief who had voluntarily abdicated in favor of a school master and he did not intend to be the first, and there the matter has stood. Farther than that he says that Sprague has made many sharp dealings with the Indians, and has made considerable money off of them. This was the way the matter stood when some representatives of the society came down a few weeks ago to have the contract renewed. A majority did not favor the renewal, and the judicious distribution of money where it would do the most good is the reason assigned by him for a vote slightly favoring a new contract. But when it came to him it was promptly vetoed, and the representatives left for Washington threatening to force him to agree.

Chief Smith is in hopes that the government will make an order dividing the land on the reservation to the Indians severally. The present system of having everything held in common is to him one of the chief reasons why more do not favor a removal to the territory.

One thousand votes have been registered at Charlotte for the bond election on the 12th.

The First Baptist church of Raleigh will build a mission chapel to cost about $1,000.

Another canning factory that will handle both vegetables and fruit will be started at Raleigh.

A Smithfield colored man is in jail charged with selling meat from a hog that had died a natural death.

Mr. Robert Combs, aged 79 years and Mrs. Ava Elmore, aged 53 were married at Goldsboro.

Mrs. Evander Morrison was found dead in her bed at Winston. She retired apparently well and hearty.

A company is being formed at Henderson to develop the famous Shocco Springs property in Warren county.

Raleigh is to have a lodge of Pythian Sisterhood. The Knights there favor it and the chances for it are bright.

Elias J. Jenkins, a prosperous farmer of Granville county, dropped dead while walking on the streets of Oxford.

Miss Cusack, the "Nun of Kenmore," could not make arrangements for her lecture at Raleigh and left for Richmond.

Adjutant General Glenn reports that both the Third and Fourth regiments will go to Richmond on the occasion of the unveiling of the Lee monument.

T. C. Diggs resigned his position as secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Goldsboro, but the influence of friends compelled him to change his mind and pull the string.

The Board of Aldermen of Raleigh has elected J. N. Holding city attorney, vice R. T. Gray, who after having served seven years, declined re-election.

Only twenty-two marriage licenses were issued in Wake county during April. Ten of these were for white couples. This is considered to be a very poor month for Wake.

W. J. Kearns, who six years ago was sent to the penitentiary from Randolph county, for manslaughter, under a sentence for life, has been pardoned, as imprisonment was killing him.

The supreme court has not as yet filed an opinion in the Boyer-Teague case, involving the question as to whether Boyer or Teague is the sheriff of Forsyth county.

The democratic ward meeting in Goldsboro nominated the following for aldermen: Nathan O'Berry, J. M. Hollowell, W. T. Hollowell, M. L. Lee, Robinson, Henry Lee, Thomas Edmundson, W. H. Suggs, A. B. Hollowell.

Mr. T. W. Braswell, a Charlotte jeweler, has a curiosity in the shape of a watch made in Ireland in the year 1107. This is more of a curiosity because of the fact that watches were not made until several centuries later.

A young negro man died at Sanford and on the following day the negroes formed in a long procession headed by a brass band, carried the remains to the grave and interred them under the auspices of lively music. The tune was Suwanee River.

The cotton receipts at the Charlotte market for this year are still nearly 4,000 bales behind the receipts for last year. From last September 1st to date, the receipts foot up 17,720 bales against 21,654 for the same time last year, making a decrease of 3,934 bales.

Annie Smith, a mulatto woman who came to Concord from Wilmington to find work in the factories there, says she was born in 1776, making her now 114 years of age. She says her father was at one time chief of an Indian tribe. While her face shows age, she is said to be spry.

The Charlotte News states that one of its reporters learned on what he considers pretty good authority, that a force of 1,500 hands are already at work constructing the road-bed for the Richmond and Danville's new line from Danville through Winston and Gastonia.

Mr. Frank Hitch will probably take up his railroad from Hamilton to Tarboro' and connect with the Wilmington and Weldon railroad at Whitaker's. Mr. Hitch's road has been running from Hamilton to Tarboro' for several years, and has been worth a great deal to Tarboro'.

Mr. J. D. A. Secrest, of Monroe, has a relic of the revolutionary war which he values very highly. It is a musket, which was captured at the battle of King's Mountain by Maj. John Secrest, who was a brother of Mr. Secrest's grandfather, and it has been in the family ever since.

Mr. W. H. Worth, State business agent of the Farmers' Alliance, is deeply interested in the new machinery and process for making cotton bagging of the fibre of the stalk, and has requested that machines be sent here, for practical tests on the farms. If the machine answers, the farmers will know how to get the 3,000,000 yards of bagging required to cover North Carolina's cotton crop.

Make Locklier, mulatto, was killed while assaulting an officer at Red Banks. He was brought before 'Squire Robert Townsend on charge of selling mortgaged property, and was required to give a bond of of $50 for his appearance at the May term of court, which he refused to do, but drew a knife and assaulted the officer and his posse, and he was shot through the body by some one. It is not known who fired the fatal shot.
