> SCORE ONE FOR WANAMAKER. With a flourish of trumpets and unding of drums the Pittsburg Chroncle-Telegraph announces that Mr. John Wanamaker has put himself on record as being a patriotic American, and it calls the attention of all Americans to the fact that the postmaster-general has flatly refused to name a postoffice in Minnesota "Guttenberg." Our Pittsburg contemporary says that he thinks an American name quite good enough for an American town, and intimates that he has taken brave stand in the matter.

> Now, let the ennemies of Mr. Joh Wanamaker be just and give the great clothier his due. We have long believed that he would yet be guilty of some act in his official career which would distinguish him and redound to the credit of America; and here it is at last!

We cheerfully place this braye deed to Mr. Wanamaker's credit, and we confi dently expect that before he turns over his books to a democratic successor in 1892, we will have the privilege of recording some other creditable transac tion of his to relieve its loneliness.-At anta Constitution

DANGERS TO EDUCATION.

The necessity of an educated citizenship recognized by every one. The duty of the State to bring within the reach of every citizen means for an education suficient to enable him intelligently to perform his duties as a voter is conceded in very State in the Union.

The chief danger to our educational in stitutions comes from a tendency to overload them, to demand too much of them

Governmental interference of this kind nearly always results in injury to the cause we aim to advance. If we are to have appropriations from Congress for the establishment of universities, and other schemes including a course of studies having in view certain specific ends the whole system of public education will break down of its own weight, and the ources of income will be dried up.

Let the government keep its hands off of the higher educational institutions, leaving the States the support and conduet of the common school and to the beneficence of private citizens the maintenance of our colleges and universities. In this way will we best advance the interests of education.-Louisville Courier
