FACTS AND COMMENTS.

JOHN CONNOR, who gained the unenviable name in New York of "Jack the Ink Slinger" has just been sentenced to six months in prison and to pay a fine of $250. His sentence was altogether too light but he got the full penalty. Society has no place for such brutes.

Lo, the poor Indian, is occasionally heard from and in a manner that indicates that he is fast becoming civilized. O'Soup, one of the Sioux chiefs, has placed the wants of his people before Lord Stanley, of Canada. His tribe wants a stallion, a doctor, a pedigree bull and a patent windmill.

From the manner in which Dr. Weaver has gone about his duties as sanitary inspector it is very evident that he is bent upon doing his duty and he should receive the encouragement of every resident of Asheville. Just what the city has needed for some time is a thorough sanitary inspector, one who knew what was required of him and was willing to do it. Dr. Weaver has started out well. If he continues Asheville will have no cause to complain of its sanitary condition.

Of the Ewart interview which appeared in the Washington Post and afterwards in THE CITIZEN, the Statesville Landmark says: "Some republicans here think that the Ewart interview, which is from the Washington Post and published on the second page of this paper, is only 'tally' for Eaves, whom Ewart is charged with having twice played for a sucker—first in the struggle over the appointment and second over the confirmation—but whose help he wants hereafter in the ninth district in which is Mr. Eaves' home."

With regard to the interview with Congressman Ewart on the non-confirmation of Eaves by the senate, which appeared in Thursday's CITIZEN the Charlotte Chronicle says:

Congressman Ewart brings forward, in his Washington Post interview, a great many reasons why Eaves' nomination as collector should not have been rejected by the senate.

Mr. Ewart says too: "The distinguished democratic senators from my State are doubtless laughing in their sleeves at the shrewd manner in which they have gulled and hoodwinked certain republican senators who voted with them for Eaves' rejection."

And the democrats of North Carolina are laughing in their sleeves at the thought that they have such a pair of trumps in the United States senate.

The file of the average editor is by no means a happy one. Sometimes they start out with a determination to do what is right and keep at it, and then somebody will step in and make them stop. That was the experience of the Nashville Advocate. It has been a great deal of a determined war upon the Louisiana Lottery. A few days ago it received the following letter from a critic and of course it had to let up.

Big Sandy, Tenn., June 15, 1890.

Editor Advocate:—I see you still keep saying something in your paper about the Louisiana lottery this is to inform you that you don't put no money in it. You got no rite to say anything it is a good thing & perfectly fair. You Church fellows are getting in the world again to back & I don't want no more in that paper about that lottery unless you will speak incurring about it.

Your Obedient Servant

On the evening of the day that Kemmler heard of the final decision of the court of appeals affirming the judgment condemning him to death by electricity he is reported as saying to his keeper: "Well, old man, you seem to take it harder than I do. See"—raising himself to his full height and expanding his chest—"I am not nervous or downcast, and I know by your solemn way how my case has ended, and learned my fate from your actions. But it will be all right, Daniel, don't feel bad. I knew all along we would have to part, and was ready to hear what your good old heart dreaded to reveal to me." For a man who was arrested could not write his own name, Mr. Kemmler seems to be acquiring the "modern fiction" style of speaking with a great deal of success. It would have been interesting to hear the condemned murderer deliver himself of his little effort especially that portion where he says, "I was ready to hear what your good old heart dreaded to reveal to me."

ANOTHER North Carolina republican besides Ewart has been found who is opposed to the force bill. He is ventilating his views through the Washington Post. The gentleman is Mr. M. L. Fox, who was senior editor of the Advance-Herald here during the last campaign, and has been a life-long republican. "While elections are not fair in many parts of the South," said he, "ballot box stuffing and the much-talked-of violence and bloodshed are of rare occurrence, and usually the facts are distorted and exaggerated beyond recognition in reaching the North. Election frauds practiced in the South are of a kind over which bayonets can have no influence, and with the present jury system a prosecution for bribery would be laughed at. The passage of the Lodge bill could not be otherwise than unfortunate to the interests of the republicans in North Carolina. In the Ninth congressional district there is little doubt that Mr. Ewart will be able to lead the republicans to victory in case but once surround the ballot box by deputy marshals, and it will be a Waterloo to the republicans."

HE IS OPPOSED TO IT.

Congressman Ewart on the Election Bill.

The federal election law came up in the house on Saturday and the only republican to openly oppose it was Congressman Ewart. His speech attracted a great deal of attention. The dispatches speak of it as follows:

Ewart, of North Carolina, a republican, opposed the passage of the bill. He was aware of the penalty he should pay. Unfortunately, politics had come to such a pass that, under the rule of King Caucus, men would vote for measures that, deep down in their hearts they did not believe in. They knew deep down in their hearts that this was a damnable and vicious piece of legislation as ever was put on the statute books. As to the negro's political rights, he asserted that no republican in the State, black or white, was prevented from casting his vote. The elections there were absolutely fair. There were men in the South who hated the negro, and abused them. Sometimes they were punished, and sometimes not. But the entire people of the South should not be blamed for the acts of a few lawless men. He was sick and tired of the sentimental talk of the negro problem. There was no such problem. It was a delusion to suppose the negro was voting the republican ticket. Many of them were voting the democratic ticket, and it was getting more and more difficult every year for the republican party to control the Blair edifice. He made a strong plea for the republican party for its failure to carry out its pledges to the South, and to treat the negro as the South would like to see the negroes vote the republican ticket. He said that he was saying that not three-tenths of the negroes of the South would vote for the republican party if an election were held tomorrow. He appealed to the republicans to leave the South alone, if they would not educate it. The appointment of supervisors and marshals in overwhelmingly black districts would result in riot, rapine and disorder. It was said that it was a scandal that frauds existed. That was so, but it must be remembered that the rights of the people were not protected by the United States but by the States, and more especially by their own ability. He would prefer to see more practical sympathy and less sentimentalism. But it was said, "Is there no remedy?" There was, and that was to mind their own affairs and to treat the colored man with wise and salutary neglect. As to the talk of no republicans coming up here from the South, why North Carolina sent as many republicans here as the great State of Indiana (laughter). The votes of Southern republicans had organized the house. More of them would continue to come here, and sometime they might be able to secure something more from the house than the committee would result in the postoffice department. He also asked why the party had not kept its pledge to remove the tobacco tax. These were the practical things which would benefit Southern republicans. With a benefit Southern republicans in the federal election bill they might be able to see the Italian on whose tombstone was this epitaph—"I was well and wanted to feel better. I took physic and here I am." (Laughter.) He read from a number of letters from prominent republicans to show that his course was endorsed there. He declared in conclusion that would humiliate and disgrace a people and be a cause of unutterable woe to them. If that was treason to the party to which he has always been loyal, they could make the most of it.

After Many Postponements. Special to THE CITIZEN.

CINCINNATI, June 30.—The A. G. Wood ballot box case was called in the courts again this morning. This case was originally brought into court November 23, 1880. It was then passed to December 2, thence to January 23, 1890, thence to February 24, thence to March 31, thence to April 30, thence to May 31 and June 30, to-day. This ballot box case figured largely in the Ohio election last fall and is the same that was the subject of a congressional investigation.

Burned the Curtains.

A blaze was discovered in Dr. C. E. Hilliard's room, on third floor of the new opera house building, yesterday. It was soon extinguished and but little damage resulted. The curtains at a window were destroyed. The fire is supposed to have started from a lighted cigarette laid on the sill by the colored boy who sweeps the room.

ANTIMIGRAINE.

NEVER FAILING CURE FOR HEADACHE.

TRADE MARK REGISTERED.

ABSOLUTELY SAFE, PERFECTLY SURE AND ALWAYS SPEEDY.

Cures Every Variety of Headache AND NOTHING ELSE.

ANTIMIGRAINE Has earned for itself the enviable reputation of being the finest, most effective and reliable article in the market for the speedy relief and cure of every variety of that common trouble, HEADACHE. The immense favor which has greeted it from all quarters, proves its true merits and acceptability to the public. It is something which almost everyone needs, and those who have once tried it, will never be without.

For its curative powers it does not depend upon the subtle influences of such poisonous drugs as ANTIPIYRINE, MORPHINE, CHLORAL AND COCAINE. Since it does not contain an atom of either of these. It is absolutely free from injurious chemicals, and can be taken by young and old without fear or serious results. It is not a Cathartic, does not disarrange the stomach, and contains no noxious or sickening ingredients.

The peculiar advantages of Antimigraine consist in its being thoroughly reliable as a cure for any kind of headache—without respect to cause—leaving no unpleasant or annoying after-effects, as in the case of other so-called "harmless" remedies. These qualities make it the most popular and saleable article in the market, wherever known.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.

The dose for an adult is two teaspoonsful in a wine glass of water. Dose for children in proportion, according to age. In either case the dose can be repeated every thirty minutes until a cure is effected. One dose will always drive away an attack of Headache, if taken when first feeling the premonitory symptoms; but if the attack is well on, and suffering is intense, the second or third dose may be required. Usually a greater number of doses is required to effect the first cure than is needed for any succeeding time thereafter, showing that the medicine is accumulative in its effects, tending toward an eventual permanent cure.
