that a meeting of the federation would be held there, at which a strike on the Vanderbilt system would undoubtedly be ordered. He said that the firm refusal of Vice-President Webb to arbitrate had rendered this action necessary. Mr. Webb's arbitrary methods, he said, made its useless to deal with him any longer.

The Central officials are preparing to meet a general strike if one should be ordered. Mr. Webb said to-day that he did not doubt that the supreme council of the railway employes federation would call out the men, but he did not believe nearly so many of them as the labor men expected would leave their posts. The majority of the company's employes, he thought, would remain at work.
