"Impecunious Emigration."

In a letter signed "P" in yesterday's CITIZEN this sentence occurred:

"Mortgages [in Kansas] may be accounted for on the supposition that many families, impecunious from rum, emigrated there with the hope that by escape from its influence they might better their fortunes."

This strikes us as a violent supposition, a very strange and uncharitable view to take. It has never come under our observation that "impecunious" families formed any considerable proportion of the great body of emigrants. Money is necessary to emigration, and the family with a rum-besotted head is generally anchored to the environment in which it was reared.

We know something of the emigrant. We have heard

"the tread of pioneers
Of nations yet to be;
The first low wash of waves where soon

and there was very little rum to be seen about it. Our frontiers are subdued by as temperate a class of men as may be found among the rear guard that await, before moving to the front, the measure of civilization they have not the courage to be the means of helping to create. Mortgages have hurt Kansas because the state was invested by money sharpers who took, and take, the last pound of flesh, and because there was not in the state the natural rich ness in a degree to sufficiently remunerate the settler and his bonnsation too. But in large part the emigration was of a kind that saves in the cities, at the mines and in the shops to be enabled to leave the more crowded portions of the country and secure a piece of ground where there would at least not be danger of starving.

ROBERT T. LINCOLN has written this from London:

"For myself, I would be, in Pennsylvania, a supporter of senator Delamater, as an ardent and able republican, holding his defeat as the chosen head of our ticket, to be dangerous to the national upholding of the principles we have at heart."

"The national upholding of the principles we have at heart" should be honest, economical, intelligent and decent government by reputable men, but they are not such with the republican party at present. The party is besotted with the Quay idea that a majority of votes is a vindication of character, and that explanation or denial of the gravest charges is not necessary, but it is painful to know that our minister to England, himself a clean handed man, is a disciple of Quay, a man who was so far gone at one time in his estimate of himself that he was debating as to a choice of deaths—drowning or cutting his throat.

IT WAS a surprise to many newcomers in Asheville to learn that in administering the oath of registration the "kissing of the book" was insisted on. The practice has age to recommend it to our respectful consideration, but nothing else. It tends to bring into disrespect the bible to see it knocking about a registration office and to see its lids kissed by many who know nothing of its contents, and that it adds anything to the binding power of the oath may well be doubted. The person who has determined to swear falsely as to the requirements of registration will not be deterred by a perfunctory, irreverent ceremony, necessarily not done in solemnity and with thoughts of a kind to be associated with the greatest of all works, the word of God, but in haste and with no explanation of the especial meaning that might be attached.

ROBERT P. PATTISON, democratic candidate for governor of Pennsylvania, was libelled on Saturday and yesterday began suit against the newspapers that published the libel. It is of course possible for even a guilty man to have the assurance to bring a libel suit; but at least the matter goes before a competent and impartial tribunal and the truth is pretty certain to come out. Hence the strong inference is that Pattison is innocent and that the newspapers in the case are barking up the wrong persimmon.

ACROSS the main street of Canton, O., when Blaine spoke Saturday, was:

"There is not a section or a line of the bill that opens a market for another bushel of wheat or a barrel of pork."

Some wicked democrat must have done that.

THE gain in registration is of course mainly due to the increase in population—the number of voters. But, on the whole, though not so large as it would have been in a presidential year, the total number is an earnest evidence of the considerable interest taken. Of the importance of the election, especially in this district, there can be no question. Crawford has done all that man can do, and now let every man vote who has registered, and may we carry the district by a handsome majority.

Asheville wants the next state fair, and the capitalists are going to put up money to secure it. This would be several tail feathers out of Raleigh's plumage.—Durham Globe.

GRACIOUS! Where did you hear the news? THE CITIZEN wants Asheville to have a Western North Carolina fair; and it is a thing "the capitalists" ought to take hold of as a business enterprise. But the signs that they will do so are lacking up to 4 p. m. to-day. However, THE CITIZEN is not discouraged.

THERE is no necessity for going to Washington to see the spirit of the civil service reform laws broken. Men in Asheville who are paid to do certain public work are affiliating with the colored voter in a way that must be as disgusting to him as it is to the white spectator.

IT seems to be characteristic of republican candidates in this campaign to be considerably absent when they have given their promise to take part in a joint debate. Ewart set the example, it will be remembered.

The Georgia editor is in the saddle.—Exchange.

Where did he get the horse?—Atlanta Constitution.

Out in the woodshed.

That's the Point.

From an Exchange.

Every man in this district remembers Ewart's many promises, and know whether he has kept them. If he has not kept his promises, he has proven false and treacherous to you. Can you trust a false, treacherous man to represent you and your interest? Wouldn't you feel better with that honest, truthful and manly man, Hon. W. T. Crawford—who was raised on a farm, and is in sympathy with the farmers—a man you can fully trust, a man who will not deceive you, to represent you in the United States congressional halls?

THE LATEST NEWS FROM NORTH CAROLINA

—The population of Stanley county is 12,206.

—Justice Avery predicts that Evangelist Fite will rival Moody.

—The next session of the North Carolina Presbyterian synod will be held at Raleigh.

—There will be no toboggan slide in North Carolina this winter.—Durham Globe. How do you know? It's getting mighty cold up here.

—There will be, it is said, over 200 cases brought against a gentleman of this county for illicit retailing of whiskey.—Concord Standard. A gentleman?

—A week ago Saturday Mrs. J. W. Lackey accidentally shot and killed her sister, Mrs. Dunmire. They both were from Gwaltney's township, Alexander county.

POLITICAL POINTERS.

The republicans have passed the word that all their men who can leave Washington are to come to North Carolina.

A friend of the republican chairman (Eaves) says the latter knows Brower and Ewart are defeated for congress, and that he will help neither in any way.

S. H. Manning writes the Wilmington Star, concerning the Wilmington collectorship, that "the president said in my presence that he should appoint a colored man to the office."

News comes from Greensboro that Brower is undoubtedly defeated and that the opposition to him is growing stronger every day, especially among the negroes.

Senator Vance thinks democrats have made gains on the republicans in registration. Senator Ransom writes that the democratic chances have improved; that if all the democrats who register will vote, the state is safe.

The democratic state executive committee is up with its work, and now it has little else to do than to await the result of its efforts. This week it will flood the State with documents, and this work will, of course, keep all busy.

PERSONS AND PLACES.

IN ENGLAND last year 9,925 persons were imprisoned as debtors or on civil process.

THE Union Baptist Society of Fremont Temple, Boston, unanimously accepted the resignation of Rev. Emory J. Haynes, their pastor.

DESPITE the McKinley tariff law one thousand live sheep and lambs passed through St. John, Canada, yesterday en route for New England.

THE FIRST locomotives ever used on the new railway from Jerusalem to Jaffa have reached the latter place. They were made in Philadelphia.

THOUGH the population of the United States is in excess of that of Great Britain, the British railways last year carried 755,000,000 passengers, as against 495,000,000 in America.

A YOUNG art student of Bristol, who directs the brush with his mouth, having been born without arms, has won a national scholarship at South Kensington. His canvasses are said to bear no evidence of his physical misfortune.

NEAR Milan nearly 22,000 acres of land, irrigated with water derived from the sewers of the city, are yielding crops of from eight to ten tons of hay as a rule, while occasionally some separate meadows will yield the fabulous amount of eighteen tons of hay per acre.

THE "barking sands" of the Hawaiian group, as described by a recent scientific investigator, are found in dunes, and are apparently fragments of shell and coral, which, when disturbed, slide down the slopes of the dunes, emitting a deep bass note not unlike the buzz of a saw in a planing mill.

SOME few years ago the Paris picture dealer Ferret bought a picture for 10f. in a rag and bone shop. He soon discovered that it was a portrait by Jordaen, and got rid of it for 15,000f. to the late M. Rothan, the diplomatist. The picture—which is in Jordaen's best manner—has just fetched 58,000f.

THE committee for the erection of a monument to William Tell has, by a majority of 9 to 3, decided in favor of the site in front of the town hall of Altorf. The hero is to be represented in a bold and resolute attitude, with a cross-bow in his hand, and in the costume of the Swiss peasantry of his time.

ENEMIES OF HIS PEOPLE.

Reasons Why Republicans Should Abandon Their Party.

From the Statesville Landmark.

One of our exchanges contains this paragraph:

Mr. W. Y. Jones, the most popular republican leader in Granville county, openly proclaims that if you will show him three white republicans in the south he will show you two scoundrels.

We concur with THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN in disapprobation of this publication. It is not true; no man, either with or without sense, believes it to be true, and nothing is to be made by this traduction. There are many white republicans in the south who are personally honorable, honest men. How they can affiliate with those men of the north who hate the south, who are now trying to dragoon it by means of a force bill, who rob it by pension legislation in the benefits of which it does not share, who have just enacted a tariff law which is vilely sectional in its character, who are seeking to strike down a great southern industry by legislating against cotton seed oil—how they can tolerate a party the stock in trade of which is denunciation of their people, we can in nowise comprehend.

Though he believes in every tenet of the republican party and repudiates every principle for which the democratic party stands, still no southern white man should league himself with the enemies of his people. Yet some honest men among us do so and it is neither neighborly nor just to brand them as scoundrels. The prejudices of the war control many of them and others are republicans by inheritance. Many of these despise their association and would tremble at a thought of their party carrying a state election, well knowing that the bad element in it predominates and that it would wreck the state. These ought to abandon their party; they should not allow any false pride of consistency to keep them in a company in which they do not belong. Many of them, moved by the outrageous sectionalism of the present congress and the present national administration, have come out on the side of their own people, but none have been aided to do so by being abused.

We hope no honest white republicans will think the democratic party generally has any sympathy with such intemperate utterances as that quoted above. On the contrary they are estimated at exactly what they are and will be welcomed into the ranks of those who are their natural allies if they will come out and abandon their party to the black people and to the ignorant and vicious white men who belong to it by instinct.

SOMEWHAT ODD.

Greenville Reflector: Mr. Noah Forbes, jr., brought us two curiosities. One was a twin apple, both growing from one stem, and the other was a peanut, the stem of which had grown through a stick, the pod forming on the opposite side from the vine.

Southport Leader: Mr. D. B. Staniland while on a short canvassing tour of Brunswick and Horry counties, was attacked by two large bald eagles. They both flew at him but became entangled with each other, and Mr. Staniad killed them both and brought them home.

New Berne Journal: The schooner yacht Manatee has arrived in port from Washington with two rare curiosities known as the Manatee, or Sea Cow. They weigh upwards of 700 pounds apiece and inhabit both land and water. In appearance the head is like that of a cow and the body is similar to the whale.

Franklin Times: Mr. George Joyner, who lives about four miles southeast of Louisburg, during the last spring found a partridge nest in which there were thirteen partridge eggs and one hen's egg. Later, on going to the nest he found the thirteen partridge eggs, but the hen egg had hatched and the partridge had left the nest with the chicken. The chicken is now wild in the woods on his farm.

At a festival given by colored people in Oxford, a generous table was spread, and twenty cents was charged for a person eating as much as he could hold One man ate one hom, half middling, one duck, six chickens, one pound cake, five slices of cake, thirty-two tea cakes, three glasses lemonade, one cup of coffee and one biscuit. Then he started to go over the bill of fare again, but was headed off, the Day says.

A Pair of 'Em.

From the Hickory Press.

It has been proven by men of good character that J. Wiley Shook helped Ewart to get up and then urged him to deliver that speech against the force bill. J. Wiley denied it and they have proven it on him. He and Ewart are a nice pair.

Of course there's money in printer's ink, but the man who makes the most intelligent use of it gets the most money out of it. It does not pay to advertise something you haven't got, or anything you cannot do and do well. The man who advertises a fraud must have a "good" fraud, and he who advertises bargains in goods must be prepared to satisfy his customers.
