KEEP THEM OUT OF MUD.

PLEA FOR THE PUBLIC SCHOOL CHILDREN.

Correspondent Tells Some Very Harsh Truths About the Mud, and Buggests a Question For the Lyceum to Discuss.

EDITOR THE CITIZEN:-Have we a street committee in Asheville, or some sort of an inspector of highways? (I cannot call them streets.) If we have any such officials, I am sure they must be blind, or very careless of the most urgent necessities of the people. Which is the more needful, good sidewalks to your barcooms, or to your public schools?

For two weeks, the streets leading to tne Orange street school, have been a disgrace to a civilized community. Two days ago I was crossing the street as the crowd of three or four hundred children were pouring out of the building. At the Bridge street crossing no scene from Pan-demonium could have rivalled the confusion of those poor hapless children, or any cries from Gehenna more pitiable than their distress; all on account of the negligence of somebody in allowing these highways daily traversed by helpless hildren to remain in a totally unimproved condition. I saw children of tender years slip of the miserable crossing; some rolled in the mud, others lost overshoes; books were dropped in their frantic efforts to keep their bodies out of the engulfing mire. In such an emergency overshoes are a hinderance. I pulled mine off right there and walked with them in my hands till I reached terra firma. I was tired o putting them on for Asheville mud to pull off. I saw one of the lady teachers of the school slip along a distance of twenty yards or more without raising her feet from the ground, for everytime she did so the ruthless mud, "regardless of cour-tesy to man or maid," pulled off her

Some time early in November an order was issued for a sidewalk on Clayton street. For three weeks the timbers have been idling in the ditch, and this street, over which many of the school children travel daily, is worse than Bunyan's "Slough of Despond." If this tim-ber is not removed or put up into a sidewalk they will have to send a detective with a pickaxe after it, to get it out of Coming down Bridge street, from Chestnut, a day or so ago, I encountered a lady on her way to the Mission hos-pital. When she reached Clayton street crossing the outlook in front of her was too formidable. She turned eastward into Clayton street, but alas! for al human hopes, she had only left Scylla to encounter a more formidable Charybdis, and the last I saw of her she was strug gling through the depths of Asheville

For the next subject of discussion before the Lyceum I'd advise: "Are we bet-ter than mud turtles?" In behalf of the children of Asheville 1 appeal to the proper authorities for the redress of this wrong. For the sake of bealth, for the sake decency, for the sake of humanity, act at once and let not this stain rest longer upon our city's escutch-LESTER HOWARD BROOKES.

This is all true and only half the story. Children have positively Asheville on their way to she said. school and remained in a mess of mud and water crying until pulled out by men who happened to be passing. Whether any children were actually lost or not remains to be determined by the next census or the further complaints of parents.-ED. CITIZEN.

W. A. FANNING'S DEATH.

Camp Patton Car No. 8 Draped in His Memory.

W. A. Fanning died at the Grand Central hotel at 12:30 last night. Mr. Fanning had been suffering from oneumonia for about ten days. He was attended by Dr. M. L. Neilson, On Sunday there were signs favorable to his recovery, but on Wednesday he became very much worse, and from that time to his death he suffered intensely. He was 29 years of age and unmarried.

The remains will be taken to his old nome in Henderson county, and interred in the family burying ground at Fanning's Chapel. The funeral services will be conducted by Rev. J. F. Woodfin, as-sisted by Rev. J. D. Roberson, of this

Mr. Fanning was up to the beginning of his illness in the employ of the ville street railway company, and to-day Camp Patton car No. 8, on which he was motorman, is draped with mourning, in respect to his memory.

SUDDEN DEATH.

Mrs. Minna Muller Drops Dead of Heart Disease.

Mrs. Minna Muller, wife of Prof. J. D. Muller, dropped dead at 1:30 this afternoon at the residence of her son, W. O Muller, No. 16 Charlotte street.

Mrs. Muller had been in good health up to a few days ago, since which time A Committee Appointed by the she has been suffering slightly from a bronchial affection. To day Mrs. Mul-ler's dinner had been sent to her room. While the servant had gone into the din-ing room Mrs. Muller was stricken with heart disease and a few minutes later was found dead.

Mrs. Muller was 76 years old and was a member of the German Lutheran church. The interment will probably not take place until Sunday.

Answer, Messrs. Edmunds and sherman. Washington cor. Philadelphia Ledger.

Colored men in Washington who are mittee will go carnestly to work at once, and are able to pay $2,000 a year in The alliance beld another meeting this competent to draft state constitutions and are able to pay $2,000 a year in taxes cannot vote on the smallest question that comes up, and are as completely ignored as though they were in darkest Africa.

Now, why do not the highly-virtuous Chandler, Edmunds and Sherman, to name the senators who have most savagely denounced the south for not letting the negroes vote, why do they not let the negro vote in the District of Columbia, where their absolute power to have things done just as they want them done is perfectly unquestionable? Here is a disfranchisement more complete than they have ever charged against any digestion with immediate relief.—O. G. Sparks, ex-mayor, Macon, Ga.

Bill Nye has not forgotten Asheville. Asheville has not forgotten Bill Nye. Two great facts.

Bill will be remembered as the inter tionally and professionally humorous gentleman who resided in the midst of Buncombe several winters ago, abd contributed several choispoits of gossip concerning this section, and is the author of that famous sentence: "If the people of have been an attack of bronchitis. Western North Carolina would work their butter more and their cows less the their butter more and their cows less the former would be greatly improved."

Mr. Nye also wrote a very funny letter to the New York World, which, it is thought, procured him his position on the staff of that paper, giving his experience with one of Asheville's "unusual winters" and his ideas of the style of perforated architecture observed by Ashe ville architects.

But Nye has been forgiven, and he is oming back. He, of course, could not ocure a house in Asheville, on account of the great demand for dwellings, so he lid the next best thing. Nye has rented a residence at Skyland springs, taking it for one year, and about March 1st will come down from New York and settle down to enjoy a oleasant mountain summer. He says i letter that he rents the house at Sky and because he can be Nye Asheville. This news is authentic, coming from

Mrs. Nve, who wrote to a friend in Ashe ville, making the fact known. Plum Levi, the barber, with whose picture Mr. Nye illustrated one of his letters, will doubtless be overjoyed when he hears the news, as quite an attachment had sprung up between Mr. Nye and

Mr. Nye can be assured that the citi

FOR THE FAIR.

Buncombe Alliance.

The Buncombe county Farmers' alli ance met in the court house this morning. Nearly all of the sub-alliances were represented. Several important resolutions were passed at the morning meeting, among which was one advocating strongly the establishment of a Western North Carolina fair at Asheville. A committee of alliancemen, one from each township, was ap appointed, which will confer with citi zens of Asheville as to the best means of securing a fair for this section. The comished until to-morrow. Will Live in Asheville.
