Caldwell Seriously Injured on the Western North Carolina Railroad Twenty Miles Below Asheville.

That was the condition of Daniel Lee and Andrew Caldwell, of Madison, Sun day morning about 5 o'clock.

A little before 5 o'clock yesterday reight train on the way to Asheville, miles below this city, on the Western North Carolina railroad.

The engineer had just got the train harp curve in the road, he was horrified the track just a few yards ahead of him The engine was reversed and brakes applied, but all was useless. The heavy train was too near the men when they were discovered, and no earthly power ould save them.

With a shudder at what he knew was nevitable the engineer closed his eyes to he terrible scene and awaited the shock It came, The forward trucks of the tender were thrown from the rails and were dragged along over the cross ties until the train was stopped.

As seon as possible the trainmen searched for the men who had been struck. They saw a sickening sight, for he body of Daniel Lee had been cut two by the engine wheels, and mangl fearfully. Andrew Caldwell, Lee's copanion, was alive, but one leg was er off below the knee, and the other le badly crushed. Servants and a Servant. From the Charlotte Chron The old ante-bellum housekeepers can not get into the trend of changed conditions at their period of life. In other words, the thoughts, the habits, and the customs of a whole existence cannot be easily changed. The old time housekeep ers still love to have many servants around them as of yore. If they hire then cheaply, so much the better, they think No consideration is paid to the number of mouths they supply. Many of these mistresses were raised on plantations where food was plentiful and the cost of living was not taken into consideratio How much better and more economic would it be to employ one trained, care ful servant who would dispatch work with intelligence and without a flurry or
