What She Do It.

Hear what Winston says through the Sentinel, speaking for its city: "Of course Winston is going to have the best display that will be made at the exposition of the southern interstate immigration bureau at Raleigh this fall. We say of course because the community has formally said so through its chamber of commerce. It will be a good advertisement for our interests among many cities. It will set people to talking about us and coming to see us and that is all we want. He who once drinks of our spring will come again."

This is good. We like the spirit of it. It bespeaks the confidence of a city that has done great things, is capable of great things, and glad of the opportunity of letting the world know what she has done and what she can do. But is she going to have the best display? Will she be without a successful competitor? Shall her friendly rival, Asheville, suffer herself to be second best? Knowing what Asheville has done, what she can do, we think Winston will be surprised when she comes to compare notes.

The Sentinel says "it will be a good advertisement for our interests among many cities." So it will be. But Asheville is advertised already as far as publicity goes; what is wanted now is proof that she is not advertised in vain, that her boasts are not empty words.

This exposition is a fixed fact; in some respects a solemn fact, for the hand has been put to the plow and cannot be turned back. The state, the counties of the state, all the towns and cities thereof, are pledged to the redemption of very grave responsibilities. All are pledged to do their best, for we are to act on our own soil, in the presence of the whole country, perhaps of the whole civilized world. Therefore let Asheville see to it that she is distanced neither by Winston nor any other city in the state. And as the Sentinel calls upon Forsyth county to put its best foot foremost, so do we invoke the emulation of Buncombe. Did Buncombe ever fall short? We never heard of it. We commend to the people of this county the suggestion made to those of Forsyth:

"But what we started out to say was that it is time for us to be making preparations. The harvest is almost upon us. Forsyth must prove again her superiority in small grain, grasses, etc. Then the small fruits are now ripening. The good housewives must prepare and exhibit their finest preserves and canned fruits and vegetables. We must not say if we had only thought of it we could have done so and so. We must think of it and have no omissions in our lists. Our tobacco interests will be looked after as will our manufactured articles of every sort. The perishable articles that are in season now or that are coming into season claim our first attention."

Those Extracts From Sermons. THE CITIZEN printed yesterday five noteworthy extracts from sermons preached by New York reverends. All of these extracts, which were fairly characteristic of the sermons entire seemed to indicate the fever of unrest, of doubt, of strife. Some of them also breathe an air of defiance.

"The heresy that is a record of barbarism, a relic of savagery. It smells of roasting flesh," says Rev. Thomas Dixon. Surely this is a sensational exaggeration. The Presbyterians have a perfect right to ascertain whether, judged by a majority of their best minds interpreting their creed, Dr. Briggs is a proper man to prepare young men for the Presbyterian ministry. To find that he is not, does not bar Dr. Briggs from heaven, or from further expression of his opinion at any time. It simply redefines Presbyterian doctrine and prevents the spread of wrong conceptions concerning it. It is easy to see how many false standards one teacher of Presbyterian theology might instill who had in charge young men to whom he was appointed to light the way. The harm that might result, from a Presbyterian point of view, would be incalculable. There is no persecution in a church deciding whether its teachers are teaching true doctrine. Some supervision there must be, in this as in everything.

But it is doubtful if Dr. Briggs' teaching can do the harm that is made possible by Dr. Winchester's remark: "There is a belief present that clergymen today are not honest; that they believe things they dare not preach, and that they preach what they do not believe and what they feel certain in their own minds is not true."

Once let this opinion make anything like universal headway and there would be empty churches all over the land as a result. Laymen can pass over small doctrinal errors, but not to have faith in the honesty, the sincerity of your pastor is to desert him forthwith. Dr. Winchester must be mistaken. It cannot be a common belief that "clergymen today preach what they do not believe;" in other words, are liars.

The editor of the Wilson Mirror is a genuine comedian, and we have been supposing that God created him in his mercy and loving kindness, simply to amuse the world.—Charlotte Chronicle.

THE CITIZEN has no doubt that the editor of the Mirror is a gentleman. Our objections are simply to the rot he prints, and to the fact that it has been held up as a model for North Carolina editors.

A LARGE portrait of ex-President Cleveland was received at the White House Wednesday and hung on the east wall of the main vestibule in full view of everyone who enters the house. Coming events cast their shadows before.

THE New York Herald says that Mr. Blaine is losing his mind. There is nothing to show that Mr. Harrison is finding it.

EDISON'S LATEST.

A Big Promise by The World's Greatest Inventor.

Should Patti be singing somewhere, my latest invention will put her full length picture upon the canvas so perfectly as to enable one to distinguish every feature and expression of her face, see all her actions and listen to the entrancing melody of her peerless voice. The invention will do for the eye what the phonograph has done for the voice, and reproduce the voice as well, in fact, more clearly. And when this invention shall have been perfected, a man will be able to sit in his library at home, and having electrical connection with the theater, see reproduced on his wall or a piece of canvas the actors, and hear anything they say. I can place one so it will command a street corner, and after letting it register the passing sights for a time, I can have it cast them on a canvas so that every feature and motion of the passers, even to the twitching of the face, can be seen, and if a friend passed during the time, you may know it. This invention will be called the "Kinetograph." The first half of the word signifies "motion," and the last "write," and both together mean the portrayal of motion. The invention combines photography and phonography.

"Hook's Drunken Harangue." From the Atlanta Constitution.

For years Hook was a heavy drinker, and many were the times that he appeared on the floor of the house in a state of intoxication. One day he made a speech while in this condition, and some of the papers came out plainly and stated it. He read it the following day when at lunch in the house restaurant, with some of his friends. When he finished he laid the paper down and said: "Boys, that's true, but I shall never be charged with such again. I shall never drink another drop as long as I live." And he kept his word, but his reputation as a drinker lived with him.

A year after making this statement he made a speech in the house on the force bill, and a southwestern paper came out the next morning with a column account of "Hook's Drunken Harangue." When he read it he walked over to one of his friends on the democratic side and said: "I have not taken a drink for a year, but you see how my reputation stays with me? Now, my people at home will think I have gone to drinking again, but whatever is said I do not taste a drop of liquor now if my life depended upon it."

Mr. Westall's Position. EDITOR THE CITIZEN: From an editorial of last Saturday I see that you have misapprehended my position and remarks at the Lyceum where the lynching of the Italians at New Orleans was discussed.

As the opening speaker on that occasion I exercised the right to fix the premise of debate. I did not put the lynched Italians on trial as members of the Mafia, or for the murder of Hennessy, to determine whether or not they were guilty and deserving of death, but assumed the position for argument from the claims of the citizens who did the lynching. I reasoned from their standpoint alone, in order to reach the conclusion of justification for the act.

[Had THE CITIZEN understood Mr. Westall's position to be as outlined above, the editorial he refers to would not have been applied to him. As a matter of fact it should not have been.—EDITOR CITIZEN.]

"Mirror" Rot. From the Wilson Mirror

On Tuesday we were "reading proof," the most disagreeable and trying and annoying thing in newspaper work, when all at once a precious gleam of Heavenly loveliness drifted into the office, the sanctum grew radiant and resplendent, for one of the purest jewels that ever glistened in the corner of humanity was before us in all her pristine purity and matchless loveliness and incomparable sweetness, and made us feel that if an angel ever did live in maiden's precious form it lived in hers, for she fills earth with the sweetest of sweet cheer, and heaven itself could never be more precious and more dear.

Who rules in this town? Depends on the question up. The lamp-chimney question—what sort do you break? Whatever sort your dealer deals in.

How, do you think, he selects his chimneys? He buys those that cost him least; he can get the regular price for them; and the faster they break the more he sells. That's how he reasons.

Tell him you want Macbeth's "pearl top" or "pearl glass," tough glass, transparent, clear, not foggy, fine, of right shape and uniform. Tell him you'll pay him a nickel more a piece, and that will cover his extra costs twice over. Tell him you don't propose to break any more. Try your hand at ruling.

Advertising CREATES many a new business; ENLARGES many an old business; REVIVES many a dull business; RESCUES many a lost business; SAVES many a failing business; PRESERVES many a large business; SECURES success in any business. To advertise judiciously, use the columns of "The Citizen." Everybody reads it; and in proportion to the returns it yields advertisers, it rates as the "cheapest" in the country.

LIFE IN NORTH CAROLINA.

—William F. Daly, late business manager of the Progressive Farmer, died at his home in Lenoir county on the 16th.

—Nearly every day now there are arrivals of soldiers at the Confederate home and it is reasonable to believe that before many months pass there will be 75 inmates.

—Frank Sherrill, a white lad seventeen years of age, while at a saw-mill near China Grove fell against the saw when in motion and was badly mangled. He may recover.

—The most remarkable industry in the state is to be established in Moore county. It will be a "skunkery," that is, a place where skunks are raised for their skins.—Lenoir Topic.

—Mr. William James Battle, Ph. D. of the University of North Carolina, has obtained a Morgan Fellowship of $500 per annum at Harvard University. His special work is in advanced Latin and Greek.

—Mr. Logan D. Dameron, formerly manager of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, died at Lexington, Mo., last Saturday. Mr. Dameron was a native of North Carolina, and for many years was quite prominent in business and religious circles in St. Louis.

—Last Saturday a young son of Mr. Jesse Henson, of upper Collier, climbed into a tree after a crow's nest. Other boys mistook the boy moving about in the tree and partially concealed by the foliage, for a wild animal and shot at him. William and Andy Monteith did the shooting. Young Henson, while acrobatically injured both by the shot and by falling about 40 feet, is still alive and may recover. The Monteiths are represented as almost crazy with grief on account of the affair.—Tuckasee Democrat.

COURT SQUARE, SPARTANBURG, S. C.

Five and a half years ago I started in the music business. The people of Asheville and Western North Carolina have been kind to me and I wish to make grateful acknowledgment of it. I started by taking an agency. I became soon satisfied that the people are entitled to better instruments and better treatment than I would get acting merely in that way. Hence I started out independent to give the very best instruments for the money they had paid previously for their instruments.
