THE TATTLER.

Some Things He Sees and Hears Worth Talking About.

Before I begin my dissertation I would like to call the attention of the authorities to the wretched and dangerous condition of the plank sidewalk 'way down Patton avenue. This is done in the interest of the thousands of people, princes and paupers, who have to traverse that walk. I was over the line yesterday, and am prepared to say without any fear whatever of contradiction, that there is not a walk in this city, or any other city for that matter, that is affected by such general dilapidation as the one complained of. What's everybody's business is nobody's and the condition of that walk is getting no better fast. It looks like the board might give the taxpayers in that section better pedestrianary facilities. If they haven't the money just now to justify the appointment of a superintendent of streets, they ought to send one or two of the city's prisoners down that way with a hammer and a few nails. Some good could be done that way, at a small cost. It is, indeed, a shame that such a condition of affairs is allowed to exist, especially on the main thoroughfare of the city. The truth of the business is, though, the town should have a superintendent of streets.

It strikes me as being a most unique idea, the one put forth, as I see from THE CITIZEN, on last Monday night at the meeting of the city dads and the board of advisors, urging as an argument against the use of Belgian block on the upper portion of Patton avenue that the Belgian paving was so noisy that the business houses would be disturbed. So they decided to pave from the square down to the government building with bricks, to relieve a few stores. Who asked that this should be done? Was there a petition asking for anything of the sort? Or are the citizens to conclude that there is something selfish in this also? The bricks should have been used to French Broad avenue at least, for will not Patton avenue soon be built up with business houses? Of course it will; and unless the joint board has an idea that it is building for tomorrow instead of for years hence, it would have hesitated before deciding as it did. Won't the Belgian block disturb private families and hotels more than business houses? Now see how they did: On account of the noise (?) several hundred feet on the avenue is to be paved with brick, while down on South Main street where there are several of the prettiest residences and lots in Asheville, the block is to be used! I'll leave it to any man's common sense to say which will be the more disturbed. Seems to me the philosophy is very poor—but then I reckon it makes a big difference when you consider whose ox is being gored.

I went to ask a favor of a drug firm in this burg—and its granting will be a favor, sure. In the window of a Patton avenue drug store there is a very small skull, sitting on a shelf, grinning away as though making regular wages. Of course, it is not a real skull, but it looks very much like one, and its removal would gratify me, if not others. It is calculated to make a man think of "snakes," and some day or night some bibulous friend will see it, and there will be another inmate of the asylum. My taste doesn't run to skulls.

I went out over the dummy line the other afternoon. To say that a trip over the road is slick but states a fact that is known by everyone who has been there. But for the life of me I can't see where President Gwyn and his associates are going to realize on their venture. I suppose they know, however, and that is sufficient. That is not what I started out to say, though. I just wanted to speak a cautionary word to the managers as to the speed of their trains. The car I came back to the city on, was run at a rate of speed equal to that of the fast trains on the railroad. That should not be allowed. Such fast riding tickled me immensely, but there were ladies on the car who should not have been subject to any risks. A word will suffice, I know, to make the railroad people more careful.

I was grieved to learn of the death of "Fritz" Emmet, the German dialect comedian. The news of his death took me back several years, to the time when I saw him in "Our Cousin German." Emmet was decidedly the handsomest and most graceful actor I ever saw. Every movement of his body was peculiarly attractive, and his girlish curls, perfect teeth and laughing eyes went far toward making him the most popular man on the American stage with the ladies and children, as well as the men. The idea of catering to the tastes of the gentle sex was plainly brought out in every one of his plays, for he always had in his troupe three or four little children and a great big dog. I distinctly remember his production of "Fritz," where he introduced a quartet of happy little ragged urchins and treated them to a warble in the little old shop used in his business of basket making. And to hear Emmet sing was to long ever after to have him come your way again. Emmet's equal will not be seen or heard again soon, in my opinion. His faults caused trouble only to himself, and an appreciative public long ago forgave him for his periodical sprees. He died, as very few in the profession do, leaving a comfortable sum of money behind, every cent of which he had made with his voice and his nimble feet. Who is there to take his place? No one, I feel sure.

I had an experience the other evening that caused me to modify certain views I had held for some time. I was passing along a street after business hours when my attention was arrested by hearing words in a loud tone coming from a cabin near by. I stopped to investigate and was surprised to learn that a prayer meeting was in progress. They were colored people, but something prompted me to stop long enough to learn what was occurring. What I first heard was a prayer offered by a woman. And I am going to say right here that a prayer more earnest, more intense, and more appealing I never listened to. To be sure the language was crude, but the very simplicity of the prayer made it the more touching. Several persons came up with me, and stopped to listen. There was moisture in the eyes of every listener before the good old sister concluded. The fervor of the supplication would have astonished the brethren in some of the pretentious houses of worship, and I dare say in that day when everybody's account is balanced the bookkeeper up there will have that prayer down to the credit of the good soul who offered it, while many that have been offered in more public places will not be entered at all. I merely refer to this to say that pure religion is as beautiful and touching in one race as in another.

Now that the new police force is organized, we shall all look for a sudden cessation of the practice of holding up the light tower and telegraph poles on the square. Keep the crowd moving and the corners cleared off knights of the locust, and you will incur the undying affection of The Tattler.

MISS GORMAN'S ESCAPADE.

A Young Music Teacher Buys Goods and Skips.

From the Charlotte News.

Miss Evelyn Gorham, of New York, is a young lady of most attractive manners, is a fine singer and an accomplished musician. Her father lives in New York. She was engaged last fall as a music teacher at the Charlotte Female institute and in that capacity, she gave the greatest satisfaction.

During her nine months stay here, she had many purchases to make, and had no difficulty in getting all the goods she wanted on credit. Last week, as the time for her departure drew near, the merchants began to press her for settlements, and the result was odd. She owed Seigle & Co. $86, and walking into the store, told Mr. Thad Seigle that she was going away, but couldn't pay her bill. Mr. Seigle asked her what was she going to do about it? "Oh, nothing," she laughed.

Mr. Seigle consulted his lawyers, and when Miss Gorham reached the depot next morning with her two trunks, an officer levied on the trunks and brought them to Seigle's store.

Upon hearing this, Rev. Wm. R. Atkinson telegraphed to Morehead City to have her membership in the Teachers' assembly cancelled, and shortly after the telegram got there, Miss Gorham left for her home in New York.

GRAND AUCTION SALE OF VALUABLE BUSINESS PROPERTY,

JULY 1ST, 1891.

In the Heart of the City of Asheville, N. C.

ON PENLAND, WATER AND WALNUT STS.

16---FINE LOTS---16

Eight lots 24x75 each, on Water street; 8 lots 24x65 each, on Penland street, with a good wide 15 foot alley in rear of every lot.

Parties having money to invest in good solid business property will do well to attend this sale.

ONE LOOK

At the location and surroundings will convince any good judge of property that no such chance for safe and profitable investment has been offered to the public of Asheville for years.

No artificial charm of promised improvements, nor vague but industriously circulated rumors of railroads or hotels, nor champagne, nor Sunday school lemonade, is needed to fire the speculator's brain.

Here Are the Lots, Where All Can See.

450 feet from the public square; 300 feet from the United States government building; 400 feet from Patton Avenue and street railway; 275 feet from Main street and street railway; 300 feet from Haywood street and street railway. Almost completely surrounded with substantial brick blocks, occupied now, and forever to be occupied for business purposes as long as any business is done in Asheville.

Every one of these lots is larger than that occupied by Girdwood's laundry 350 feet away. One of Asheville's shrewdest business men paid $13 000 for that property lately. The building is not worth over $3,000, leaving $10,000 for the land, or $400 PER FRONT FOOT.

Go and see if you can buy it from him at that price now. Go and see if you can buy any property on Patton avenue, between the Public Square and Haywood street for less than $500 per front foot. Come to this sale and buy property for a shade less than that

It cost owners of this and adjoining property three thousand dollars to open the extension of Penland street southward to College street opposite the opera house. Purchasers at this sale will reap the benefits.

The occupation of Haywood street by the railway will divert to Penland street the immense tide of vehicle travel to northwest Asheville and Richmond Hill. Before you know it Penland street will become and these beautiful lots of such convenient size, will come into use for a multitude of business purposes.

Secure one or more of them while you can.

Delays Are Dangerous

In the purchase of gilt edged Asheville real estate as experience has proved for years past. Terms of sale 20 per cent. cash, balance in six, twelve, eighteen and twenty-four months at 8 per cent. interest payable semi-annually.

W. B. Gwyn & W. M. Cooper.
