It is a curious fact that the more truly 1 in the a thing seems to be what it isn't the higher it is prized. How often do we bear in the shops: "Ah, that is a lovely gingham! property will do well to attend this sale. ONE LOOK

At the location and surroundings will convince any good judge of property that no such chance for safe and prefitable investment has been offered to the public of Asheville for years. No artificial charm of promised improvements, nor vague but industriously circulated rumors of railroads or hotels, nor champagne, nor Sunday school lemonade, is needed to fire the speculator's brain.

Here Are the Lots, Where All Can Sec.

PATTON AVENUE. WEST COLLEGE STREET. Factory ALLEY (1) 1161 (2) (15)(14) (13) (5) (6) (7) (101 (8) (9) WALNUT STREET.

450 feet from the public square; 300 feet from the United States government building; 400 feet from Patton Avenue and street railway; 275 feet from Main street and street railway; 300 feet from Haywood street and street railway. Almost completely surrounded with substantial brick blocks, occupied now, and forever to be occupied for business purposes as long as any business is done in Asheville.

Every one of these lots is larger than that occupied by lirdwood's laundry 350 feet away. One of Asheville's shrewdest business men paid $13 000 for that property lately. The building is not worth over $3,000, leaving $10,000 for the land, or $400 PER FRONT FOOT.

Go and see if you can buy it from him at that price now. Go and see if you can buy any property on Patton avenue, between the Public square and Haywood street for less than $500 per front foot. Come to this sale and buy property for a shade less than that It cost owners of this and adjoining property three thousand dollars to open the extension of Penland street southward to College street opposite the opera house. Purchasers at this sale will reap the benefits.

The occupation of Haywood street by the railway will divert to Penland street the immense tide of vehicle travel to northwest Asheville and Richmond Hill. Before you know it Penland street will become and these beautiful lots of such convenient size, will come into use for a multitude of business purposes.
