THURSDAY, AUGUST 6, 1891.

THE new constitution of Kentucky, $2.201. just adopted by the tremendous majority of 100,000, suppresses lotteries, equalizes taxation, provides for the Australian secret ballot, and introduces reforms in the government of cities.

On Sunday last a New Jersey clergy man preached a sermon in which he took occasion to remark that "the immoderate use of tobacco, say fifteen cigars a day should be avoided.

This reminds us of the German who de clared that anyone who drank "as much as fifty or sixty glasses" of lager daily was a hog.

He died very suddenly between 2 and 3 o clock this morning at his resiof Mrs. Chanler's style and subject matter is for the best part just and im partial; but the writer did not form this opinion from a careful reading of "Ac- one of the triplets at Stovall, named recording to St. John." He says the berome "comes between a l'aristan and his wife who seems neither surprised nor angered to find her husband loving the Hart young beroine"; and again: "We cannot account for her indifference when it is revealed to her that her husband has become infatuated with another woman." But in the story the l'arisina loves his wife devotedly and, so far as the west installment goes, does not know that Jean, the herome, has fallen suddenly in love with him. Jean confesses this mad passion to his wife who is indifferent because she has never loved her busband and loves another man. In the handling of these somewhat difficult materials Mrs. Rives Chanler's style is more refined than in her earlier writings and there is less of the world, the flesh and the devithan we find in the novels of the much

Our community took considerable interest in the work of the institute. Some of our outside friends gave us interesting talks, encouraging us in our work.

At the close of our institute resolutions were adopted expressive of the kind wishes of the teachers for their clever superintendent and strongly urging the necessity of a teachers' association in the county. It was agreed to organize this association at the Madison Seminary on Saturday, the 10th day of October, 1891. At that time we hope to have the full cooperation of every teacher in the county.
