WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1891.

The Evening Journal may yet learn the difference between opinion and advice, but it will take time—lots of it.

The Mountain Home-Journal wants to know what we think of free coinage. We think more favorably of free coinage than of the paper that accused us of "appropriating" matter which, as a matter of fact, we paid for.

The New York Sun finds fault with Blair of New Hampshire because he, though not now a senator, uses senate stationery. There should at least be no surprise in this case. Blair, who is being paid $500 per month not to be minister of China, probably looted the senate supplies when he found he was not re-elected a member of that body, and laid in a stock of writing paper for the remainder of his natural life. He is one of the typical republicans who, having once been supported by the government, see nothing wrong in making drafts on the national treasury or supplies whether they make any return or not.

A truly refreshing thing has happened in the New York custom house. Russell Harrison, the president's son, is expecting his wife and her sister from Europe Friday. He applied to Collector Fassett for a revenue cutter to take them from the incoming steamer with their baggage, so that they would not be compelled to mingle with ordinary people at the wharf or have their trunks examined for dutiable articles. It is an astonishing fact that young Harrison was refused this favor. It is true he had no more right to ask for it than has any other citizen of this republic, but the republican way of making free use of what does not belong to any party but to the people and for certain well-defined purposes, has been so universal that Collector Fassett deserves especial mention for his exhibition of official backbone.

The Grain Crop. The notion that because the south is not a great wheat growing country, the demand for some millions of bushels of that grain will not have a good effect on our section is obviously not such a one as a financier of ability would entertain. When the Baring Brothers failed in London Asheville felt it unfavorably. It also felt, as probably did every nook and corner of the English speaking world, the almost fatal experience of the Argentine Republic with its particular brand of sub-treasury bill. It felt the tremendous loss of the millions sunk in De Lessep's canal folly. And, per contra, as there come back from Europe, millions of gold to pay for our exported wheat and to give circulation, quickening trade in every channel, purchasing thousands of articles the south has at least the raw material for which shall feel that money will be easier, and if congress will let the finances of the country alone, we shall have a few years of comparative prosperity.

One Man Dissented. Following are the essential portions of the coroner's jury verdict in the Third river wreck. "The said wrecking of the train being caused by a loose rail, the bolts and spikes of the same having been taken out by some person or persons unknown to the jury, with tools or implements belonging to said railroad company which said tools or implements were by gross negligence on the part of said railroad company left in an open shed accessible to every passer by. We do also find that several of the cross-ties at and near the break in the said railroad track, where said rail was displaced were unsound and should have been replaced and that the superstructure on the bridge was in part defective and further that the high rate of speed maintained in running trains over this bridge deserves and has the censure and condemnation of this jury." The Charlotte Chronicle says that "Mr. J. S. Ramsey, of the jury, signed the report, but does not believe that any rail was loosened or misplaced before the wreck."

"IF AGREEABLE." The Railway Commission and the Third Creek Horror. Major James W. Wilson, chairman of the railway commission, was asked at Raleigh whether the commission would take up matters relative to the disaster near Statesville. He said: "The law is not mandatory, and the commissioners are not required to act as coroners. If agreeable to my associates we will investigate it. We are to pass upon the fact as to whether any late or proper improvements have been omitted. He went on to say that the verdict of the jury was correct in stating that the disaster was caused by the removal of bolts. As to the other findings he preferred not to speak now."—Richmond Dispatch.

A Point Well Taken. The Progressive Farmer says: Our readers would be surprised to know how much we have to pay each week to keep the paper running, and it must be paid in cash. There is but little profit in the paper, even when all our subscribers keep paid up. So that if only a few fall behind it is a serious matter with us. Apart from all this, the paper must be run on Alliance principles, on a cash basis. It can be run no other way at one dollar a year. Why don't you run your sheet on subscription principles? Take your list of non-paying subscribers to the bank you do business with—of course it is a bank that favors the Alliance—and raise one-half the par value of the list in current coin of the realm.—ASHEVILLE CITIZEN.

Our Asheville contemporary's point is well taken and forcibly illustrates the impracticability of the sub-treasury scheme; though in somewhat jocular way it is done with telling force.—Payetteville Observer.

Fraid To. From the New York Sun. "What is a conspiracy?" "A plot." "Why don't Henry James and Mr. Howells conspire?"

THE STATE NEWS.

The Railway Commission has issued a circular regarding the section of the Railway Commission act requiring that connecting lines of railway shall make as close connection as practicable.

The Graham Cleaner is informed that a citizen of Chatham, on his way home from Fayetteville a few days ago, saw a lead dog hanging by the roadside. He cut him down and hauled him home, a distance of some sixty miles, and skinned him for his hide.

The farmers of Anson county have followed the example of those in Mecklenburg county, and the county Alliance passed a resolution favoring the reduction of cotton average to ten acres to the acre, provided the movement be generally agreed upon in the cotton belt.

Mr. Charles Baskerville, of Columbus, Miss., has been chosen an assistant in the chemical department of the university. He was a student of the University of Mississippi, and from there went to the University of Virginia, pursuing the study of chemistry for two years and graduating in that department. He has since pursued a post-graduate course in chemistry at Vanderbilt university, and brings high testimonials from all of his teachers.

FOUND HER BOYS. A Devoted Mother's Reunion With Her Children.

Some eight weeks ago Dr. George C. Cope, of near Organ church, was found dead in the road. Having separated six years ago from his wife, he took with him at that time the only two children—Johnnie, four years of age, and Cronium, eighteen months old. From that time on Mrs. Cope was unable to ascertain where they were. With a mother's devotion, through six long long years of heart pain and anxiety that tried her very soul, Mrs. Cope exerted every effort and influence to learn of her darling boys' whereabouts. Her efforts were all futile. After the death of Dr. Cope, she was almost frenzied with anxiety for the welfare of her children. She resolved to never cease in her search until the hidden children were located and brought back to their fond and almost heart-stricken mother. Friends advised her, but she firmly intended to go on until she struck of the whereabouts of the boys. About one week ago, Mrs. Cope, on the track of them, left for Johnson City, Tenn. With the aid of a United States officer, she began her search. Evidence led to the one of a druggist at Johnson City where she found Johnnie, now ten years of age. Mrs. Cope would not have recognized her own child under other circumstances and conditions. To find the other one, Cronium, six years of age, whom she believed was in care of Mrs. Cope's determination. She found a clue twenty-eight miles from Johnson City. Mrs. Cope found little Cronium. Mrs. Cope had not changed a particle. On the morning of Monday, she arrived here with both of the boys. She is a happy mother.

FOR MR. DEPEW. Points From English Railways That Put Ours to Blush.

From the Detroit Free Press. There are a number of kinks in European traveling that even Mr. Depew does not seem to be up to. For instance, seven first-class travelers going over to England can have an elegant car to themselves from Liverpool to London by netting, at the cost of a six pence, from Queensdown, any of the big railway lines running from Liverpool to London. When the travelers arrive at Liverpool they will find there a car reserved for them that would be hard to beat in America short of those palatial private cars used by our millionaires. There is a large parlor in the center of the car, with large plate glass windows on either side. This room is luxuriously furnished with sofas and easy chairs. At one end of the car is a ladies' drawing room and beyond this is a lavatory. At the other end is a smoking room, then a lavatory with the baggage room beyond, so that all trunks and satchels can be got at during the journey. By giving notice to the station master at Liverpool this car will be dropped off at any station on the road, so that tourists may visit the points of interest in the locality and after the sightseeing is over the car is hitched on to any train specified. The cost of all this, Mr. Depew, is simply the cost of the seven first class tickets. There is no extra charge for anything.

F. O. Hoffman, editor Times, Rocky Mount, Va., writes: "I am pleased to say that Botanic Blood Balm is the best appetizer and tonic for delicate people I ever saw. It acted like a charm in my case."

"Macbeth's 'pearl top' and 'pearl glass' lamp-chimneys do not break from heat, not one in a hundred; they break from accidents.

They are made of clear glass as well as tough, as clear as crystal. They fit the lamps they are made for. They are made for shape controls the draft; they are shaped right. Draft contributes to proper combustion; that makes light; they improve the light of a lamp.

But they cost a dealer three times as much as common chimneys, and, as they do not break, he is apt to be anxious they stop his trade. Diminished sales and less profit are not agreeable to him.

There are two sides to the question. Have a talk with him.
