W. S. P. BRYAN. From a Photograph by Lindsew & Brown began his discourse with a graphic ac ount of the invasion of Judah by the Assyrianarmy under their kingSenacherit the so-called "Mighty King." He drew attention to the clear-cut portrayal in sacred annals of Senacherib, Hezekiah the king, and Isaiah the prophet stateshe said, "those who refuse to believe in Herodotus, the Jewish Josephus and the recent readings of the concilors inscriptions found on the Assyrian monuments agree in detail with the Scripture fulle—Senacherib"—whom Mr. Bryan characterized as the first imidel—"demanded of Handish the Hezekiah the complete surrender of Jerusalem, taunted him with his helplessness scorned and biaspinemed the name of Jehovah, in whose power Hezekiah trusts tempted the lewish people with promises of a new home in a fair land and declared that as they had deserted the living God and worshipped idols on every hill they could not loop that He would aid them in their bour of need. Sena-cherib's promises were made but to be broken, and with only a feeble army Jerusalem surrounded by a countless host of Assyrians well desciplined and equipped, his ally the Egyptian king far distant Hesikiah trusting in Jehovah sent back that proudly definit answer dicta-ted by Isaiah beginning. "The daughter of Zion both despised thee and laughed thee to scorn." During the night that followed, while the Assyrians slept, the angel of death sent by the Lord, moved among their tents and 165,000 Assyri-ans slept to wake no more. Senacherib terrified by the attack of this invisible nemy and influenced by rumors of wars in Assyria returned as he came, and not an Assyrian arrow was aimed against Jerusalem." Among the lessons Mr. Bryan drew from this historic page were, that from time of the "Mighty King" to the present day the term infidel has denoted faithlessness to men as well as lack of faith in God. That now as then those who weapon the shortcomings of his follow-NEW FALL DRESS GOODS and blasphemy flourist of the followagainst the Lord. Now as then infidelity

The specimens before, though gathered a week ago, are as fresh and firm as if just plucked.

These facts establish the superiority of the James grape over all others of its family, and assures its destiny as the great wine and table grape of Eastern North Carolina, as well as that of all the country in the south. Its fine eating

The Clergyman Who is Said to Have "Killed" Blaine.

Dr. Burchard, who died Friday, was born in New England in 1812. His parents moved to Oncida county, in the state of New York. Young Burchard was of delicate constitution but with remarkable mental vigor. When he was 17 years of age he emigrated to Ken tucky in the hope of finding restored health among the mountains. While supporting himself by teaching he prepared for and entered Center college. He was still at Danville, Ky., when the cholera scourge swept over the country It was particularly virulent in that part of Kentucky. All through the reign of the disease young Burchard went from house to house nursing the sick, administering medicine and speaking words of religious comfort in the ears of the dying. His reputation extended far and wide and in almost every town in Kentucky he addressed vast audiences on the subjects of temperance, religion and human rights. He was ordained a minister of the Presbyterian church, and after some teenth street. After laboring nearly forty years Dr. Burchard retired and was made president of the Rutgers female college in New York. On October 30, 1884, at a convention of ministers at the Fifth avenue hotel, New York, to help Blaine's canvass, the Rev. Dr. Burchard delivered the address of welcome, in the course of which he said: "We are republicans and lon't propose to leave our party and identity ourselves with the party whose antecedents have been 'Rum, Romanism and Rebellion.' These last words are said to have defeated Blaine.
