Yet Mr. Gudger, who has been called the "Great Objector," was as fresh when he came out as when he went into the regular weekly pow-wow.

When the joint board, which met at 3 'clock, had adjourned, the board of aldermen met in regular session. Every member of the body was in his place, Mayor Blanton wielding the gavel.

The Pot Boils Over.

Mayor Blanton shoved over to City Clerk Young a little yellow paper which he said he desired read. It turned out to be a copy of a resolution adoped by the Commercial club on Thursday. The resolution was as follows:

Whereas, It is new admitted on all timate of the amount of General Young's paving contract, and notes given by cer-tain officers of the city for the amount which was properly due, Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed by the chair to appear be-fore the board of aldermen at their next meeting and inquire of that body if it is their intention to pay without contest due on the Young paving job and for which notes are said to be now outstand-

Tracing the Letters-A Small Bo

RICHMOND, Va., Feb. 17.-In the trial of Dr. Baker at Abingdon for poisoning his wife, the day was mainly taken up in tracing the whereabouts of the letters of Mrs. Gilmer to Dr. Baker from the time of their discovery to the time they reached the commonwealth's attorney just preceding Dr. Baker's arrest. The clerk from the Fairmont hotel, Bristol, Tenn., testified to Mrs. Gilmer's visit there, when she registered as "Mrs. Emma Gordon, Roanoke, Va." Soon after her arrival Dr. Baker came in and called for her. D. G. Rose, formerly assistant post master at Abingdon, said Dr. Baker had received lefters addressed to fictitious persons. Milyina Summons, colored girl, who once lived at Wyndham Gilmer's, had carried three letters to Dr. Baker for Mrs Gilmer and had taken two from Baker, one of the letters was dropped in the road for her.
