IT IS HARRISON AND REID

WORK OF THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION FINISHED.

Reid Nominated in Short Order at the Evening Session—A Great Blaine Hurrah, But Only a Few Votes.

MINNEAPOLIS, June 11.—Immediately after the adjournment of the convention Thursday the Blaine people called a meeting of their leaders to be held in Chairman Clarkson's room. It was long after 2 o'clock Friday a. m. when the counselors got together. Among those present were Clarkson, Quay, Fessett, Walcott and Platt. The situation was fully discussed and it was apparent that great bitterness had been engendered by the contest of the evening and the victory of the Harrison forces in the credentials committee. The advisability of dropping Blaine and centering upon McKinley or Sherman was fully discussed, but no definite results were reached and at 4 a. m. they adjourned.

Another Conference.
Platt, Walcott, Clarkson, Teller, Montelle, Morley and others on Friday morning resumed this conference. When they adjourned they figured that they would be able to beat Harrison, but in the forenoon they found their plans disarranged and were much less confident of their ability to carry out their plans. The scheme in part was to consolidate Ohio on McKinley, Michigan on Alger, and if possible to get away some of Harrison's strength in Massachusetts and Iowa. In Ohio great work was done. Foraker at first would not go into any combination on any one else than Blaine. He said he had not come for the special purpose of defeating Harrison, but to nominate Blaine and he was disposed to stick to him.

Friday morning, however, there was a decided disposition to concentrate strength on McKinley. At 10:30 a. m. one of Gov. Foraker's men said the governor would now do whatever was right and necessary, first to defeat the President and afterwards to nominate a new man. He said that the Ohio delegates were disposed to get together and bury personal differences and for the glory of the state unite and name a man they believed to be a winner. They had met and, as they sometimes did in Ohio, had come pretty close together.

Meanwhile the Harrison managers were actively working to contract the movement, and Senator Callahan, it was said, had done particularly good work in committee.

Some Harrison managers were superstitious about voting on Friday and a proposition was made, and seriously entertained, to delay the balloting until after conference day. Several of New York, said the Harrison men would not delay.

Non voting Day.
The morning opened with the Harrison people still confident, but the Blaine managers affected to be none the less determined. Chairman Clarkson said that he had received a large number of telegrams in the morning from prominent men throughout the country, who had heretofore been urging him to harmonize the opposition in support of the president, requesting him now to make every effort to bring about a reconciliation of the warring factions and urge in some manner to be satisfactory to both elements. McKinley, Rusk, Keel and Allison had all been suggested in those telegrams.

One effect of Thursday night's fight was visible on all sides on the opening Friday, and that was that the bitterness and feeling engendered in the contest of the past week had grown to proportions which, in a measure, excited the apprehension of the more conservative republicans. The Harrison people of course were inclined to be considerate, and it was the rank and file of the Blaine forces who, notwithstanding their avowed intention of adhering to the platform, were particularly anxious to see the contest of the past week had grown to proportions which, in a measure, excited the apprehension of the more conservative republicans. The Massachusetts state delegation held a conference Friday morning at the greatest anxiety and excitement as to its probable results. Various other state delegates, or a majority of delegates thereof, held impromptu conferences and the air was full of rumors of all kinds. McKinley appeared to be the man most looked to as a compromise candidate, the Blaine people particularly anxious to give out the statement that they proposed to stand by their candidate and there were indications that a strenuous attempt was being made to preserve a solid front.

In Session.
At 11 o'clock, the hour set for the assembling, the results of the long night session and anxious caucuses was plainly visible in the haggard faces of the delegates who had put in appearance. McKinley, prompt to the minute in taking the chair, was, for the third successive day, accorded the first round of cheers. Notwithstanding the trying responsibilities through which he had passed, McKinley seemed, in comparison with the majority of those before him, relatively fresh and vigorous, ready to hold the balance firmly and effectively in the great battle that promised to characterize the day's proceedings.

Looked Like Gen. Bragg.
The clergyman selected to deliver the opening prayer was a life long staunch republican, but in person he bore a remarkable resemblance to that famous democrat and party friend of Governor Cleveland, Gen. Bragg, of Wisconsin. The preacher's reputation, however, hinged on a far more solid foundation than his facial traits. He was the Rev. Wyland Hoyt, of Minnesota, whose name has long been probably as familiar to Baptists throughout the country as that of any other minister in their powerful denomination. As he sat waiting for the moment when he should lift his voice in supplication he attracted as much attention from the audience as leaders like Depey.

Conversing informal but not general all over the floor during the start, and at 11:10 o'clock Clayton, Boutelle, Burrows, of Michigan, and others of both sides seemed by their movements desires of all the time possible to get their forces ranged into something like fighting lines. Platt was one of the few of the big men who remained naturally impassive. The hurrying backward and forward, whispering and combination-making and its larger storm centers near the Ohio, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Indiana and Kansas delegations. The dark horse gossip grew with every moment. The sharp tap of the gavel at 11:15 checked the hum and was followed by cheering. McKinley ordered the aisles cleared and some sort of order was established. Dr. Hart prayed that the man to be selected as the standard bearer might be chosen by the Lord and the man after his own heart.
