Harry Skinner's first experience in the Third-Republican party must have been the convention, he was quickly rejected when it was discovered he wanted no republicanism in his.

HARRY SKINNER was in the democratic convention and didn't fit. He was in the Third party convention and the delehead of the ticket. Mr. Skinner can try the prohibitionists now.

WE HAVE come to distrust Harry Skinner, but if he withdrew, or was of fear of negro domination through possible Republican success he is not so black as he has been painted; his senses have not altogether descried him.

Ir is believed that if Asheville could offer for the State encampment a twenty five acre tract of land not far from the city, at least 1,500 soldiers would come here. Convention Notes.

The next business was the selection of two electors at large. The name of Harry Skinner was presented and a motion was made to nominate him by acclamation. There was much speaking and great noise, with cries of "Skinner."
"Put him down." "We don't want him." One delegate said Skinner had attempted to sacrifice this convention.
The vote was put and Skinner was declared nominated by acelamation, though there was a sharp rattle of "No's."

Skinner was called for, but did not res-pond. He had made speeches enough. A delegate presented the name of R. Z. Lincey, saying he had done the party good. At this a Lincoln county man celled, "So did Harry Skinner," at which there was a great yell of laughter.
