TUESDAY, AUGUST 23, 1892.

STATE Labor Commissioner of Tennessee, G. W. Ford, has been arrested for working with the riotous miners, giving them aid and encouragement. Papers found in his pockets when arrested tend to criminate him.

CANDIDATE EXUM's first effort to get out of the obscurity that enshrouded him does not do him credit; or, if it does he is not a fit candidate for any man's vote. It appears that he has been carrying concealed weapons and threatening the life of a reputable man. Even Harry Skinner would have started off better than that.

STRIKERS' LAWLESSNESS

The cause of organized labor is now almost daily brought into disrepute by the lawless actions of union strikers. Almost before the public knew of dissensions among the Buffalo switchmen, came the news of cars being burned, travel interfered with and non-union men intimidated with threats of violence if they offered to take the places of the strikers. Men whose lawlessness make necessary a display of force tarnish the fair name of the country and disgrace themselves. They give cause for the cry to be taken up all over the civilized world that a government of the people is a failure; that the United States needs a "strong government"—one that would keep a large standing army and crush riots by speedily killing off the rioters. It is true that among these strikers the ignorant foreigner—not the branded and rejected Chinaman by the way—is largely in the majority. But it is American statesmanship—or the lack of it—that allowed this kind of foreigner, the scum of Europe, to enter freely into our estate, to be with us if never of us. If our ports were closed for a generation now to such immigrants the Republic would not fully recover from the injury done.

In the meantime lawlessness, union or non-union, must be stamped out with all the force the law can afford.

TALMAGE IN DOUBLE.

T. DeWitt Talmage has been abroad for some time, but we have seen no account of his wanderings that seems so wonderful as the experience he appears to have had last Sunday. A headline in the Charleston News and Courier speaks of the Brooklyn divine as a "Lion—The people of Birmingham, Alabama, go wild over the famous preacher." The account of the wilderness includes a statement that he addressed an audience "of eight thousand persons," which is very large indeed for Birmingham, Alabama. But all the town was not there by any means. "Outside there hovered thirty thousand more people, whom Dr. Talmage addressed from his carriage after the services in the hall. "On his way back to the hotel Dr. Talmage was informed that ten thousand persons were still waiting on the other side of the town hall to hear him. He immediately returned and briefly addressed them, and the immense crowd, estimated at twenty thousand, sang 'Praise God, from whom all blessings flow.'"

After reading and wondering over this, it is astonishing to see a headline in the Atlanta Constitution saying that Dr. Talmage preached in London, England, last Sunday. This account says he preached every day "last week in Leeds, Bradford, Sheffield and Derby," but neither Birmingham, England, nor the more modern town in Alabama is mentioned. The dispatch also lets slip the fact that the doctor has had to go by several towns where he had been advertised to appear and that the people have been "acutely disappointed" thereat. We should think they would be. A doctor either of medicine or divinity, who can appear in two continents at one and the same time, is worth seeing.

Perhaps the News and Courier and the Constitution can get together and explain this wonder.

The South and Cotton Seed Oil.

From the Charleston News and Courier. The people of the South, including the cotton farmers themselves, show a marked preference for "pure hog lard," or what is sold to them under that name, as against cotton seed oil. Most of the "pure" hog lard is in fact very impure hog lard; and a great deal of what is called "lard" is hogs' oil, compounded with other things to make it look like lard; and the people of the South, even the farmers who supply the seed from which the cleaner, purer, more wholesome and cheaper cotton seed oil is obtained, buy and use the hog lard and its compounds and counterfeits in preference to their own product.

—Durham Sun: The family of Mr. Thos. Y. Barbee, who lives in this county a few miles from Nelson, is passing through trying ordeals. About two weeks ago Mr. and Mrs. Barbee were stricken down with typhoid fever and yesterday Mrs. Barbee died in the afternoon and her husband last night. They leave six helpless children, the oldest of whom is an invalid some aged 18 years, who is now down with the fever. It was a heart-rending sight to see five children gathered around their dead parents, weeping and begging them to come back.

M. D. Lane, Deveraux, Ga., writes: "One summer several years ago, while ratroading in Mississippi, I became badly affected with malarial blood poison that impaired my health for more than two years. Several offensive ulcers appeared on my legs, and nothing seemed to give permanent relief until I took six bottles of B. B. D., which cured me entirely."

Until further notice the cars of the West Asheville and Sulphur Springs railroads will run regularly on Tuesdays and Thursdays till 10:30 p. m. A special car will leave the pavilion at Sulphur Springs for Patton avenue each evening at the termination of the dancing. On Sundays for the concert the cars will run till 10:30 p. m.

Z. B. VANCE AT GOMBROON

THE SENATOR'S LIFE AT HIS MOUNTAIN HOME.

Three Thousand Feet Above Sea Level, in the Shadow of Craggy, North Carolina's Favorite Son is Regaining Health and Strength.

Washington had his Mt. Vernon, Jefferson his Monticello, Jackson his Hermitage, but more picturesquely beautiful and sublimely grand than any of them is Gombroon, the summer home of Senator Zebulon Baird Vance, in his native North Carolina mountains.

Gombroon is situated eight miles almost directly North from Black Mountain station, on the Western North Carolina railroad. The site of the building is upon a magnificent eminence at the southeastern base of Craggy mountain. Five hundred feet nearly perpendicularly below on the east flows the north fork of the Swannanoa river, a frolicsome, transparent mountain stream, having its source a few miles northward in Balsam Gap, at the very base of Mitchell's peak, the highest mountain east of the Rocky mountains. On the west, directly in front, rises the highest peak of Craggy, 6,100 feet above sea level, and 3,000 feet higher than Gombroon. Through the Balsam gap to the north the sombre colored Black Mountain range may be seen, and to the east runs the Blue Ridge, the highest point but one of the whole range being a close and stately neighbor. Nearer, and a little to the north, tower three majestic peaks, called by Senator Vance the "Three V's"—Vance, Vest and Voorhies, after the distinguished Senatorial trio.

As Good as Kin.

It was quite 7 o'clock on Thursday evening last when THE CITIZEN came in sight of Gombroon, and discovered Senator Vance in his easy chair on the porch. The great shadow of Craggy lent additional shade to the mammoth oaks of a century's growth that surround the house on all sides, and a gentle breeze from the north bore with it that delicious damp odor that belongs only to the primeval forest.

There were three of us in the plain country road wagon, drawn by two mules. Dr. M. L. Nelson, of Asheville, a brother-in-law of the senator, Miss Myra Pierce, of Louisville, Ky., a niece of Mrs. Vance. The Senator reached for his long staff used in climbing the mountains, and stopping upon the lawn greeted us with, "I am just as glad to see you as if you were kin to me." Mrs. Vance at once joined in the greeting, and all were speedily at home in Gombroon.

The Place of All Places.

Senator Vance is at least thirty pounds lighter than when he last visited Asheville, but there is a vigor in his step and a ring in his voice that show how rapidly he is improving in the home of his choice in the mountains. "I bathe and revel in this glorious spot," said the Senator. "During these long summer days I sit and watch the bright sunlight as it glances and gleams through these grand old oaks, and at nightfall the mellow moonlight and songs of the katydids are so restful that I feel there is no place on earth comparable to it. And then I can chew my tobacco and spit where I please," said he, and every day I feel the power of gathering strength and vigor.

Senator Vance told the story of his present breakdown in health. "When I came to Gombroon from Washington, after the stroke of facial paralysis, I felt as well as usual every other way. I was in my garden one day watching the garden, and the sun was very hot, and before I was aware of it I found myself very warm. I walked to the house and sat down on the porch and began reading my papers. Suddenly I felt a chill run through my shoulders and down my back. I went into the house and had a fire started, but the chill continued, and a severe pain set up in my joints. It continued to grow worse and became excruciating. I tried all my remedies, but they failed, and then I made an effort to get a physician, but it was two days before I found relief from hypodermic injections of morphia. I immediately started for Washington, in order to get under treatment from my regular physician. The pain in my hips went into my limbs, and was so severe that I found relief only from morphia. My physician changed his treatment two or three times, but little improvement followed. I asked him one day to tell me candidly whether he was satisfied with his treatment. He said he was. I then told him I would be candid with him and say that I was not. A consultation with eminent physicians of Washington was the result and they advised that I was suffering from 'locomotor ataxia,' or an inability to govern my locomotion. I paid my doctor $20 for telling me a lie and started for Gombroon. I have been improving every day since I came here, and have perfect control over my limbs, although they are somewhat like the Irishman's horse, 'hard to catch and not worth a d—n when you catch him.' I now have a splendid invalid's chair, good as new, for sale at cost—also a beautiful pair of crutches."

A "Diet" of Beans and Jam.

The Senator is dieting himself and is unusually abstemious. Every night for supper he gets on the outside of a dish of cold snap beans, top dressed with blackberry jam, and as a relish for breakfast he always requires a dish of fried cabbage, a recipe for the cooking of which he will give on application. The facial paralysis still gives him some trouble, though his pronunciation is perfectly distinct except in those words requiring a close compression of the lips. Senator Vance asks the blessing before each meal, with a beauty and solemnity that are most impressive. Mrs. Vance is an unusually bright and handsome woman, and is proud of the Senator as he is evidently fond of her. He calls her "mother" and she addresses him as "husband." She is evidently a great help to him in his public life, and aside from a rare literary culture and much refinement of manner, is thoroughly posted on political men and measures, and when the Senator's memory fails him on any matter he turns to her with confidence for assistance. Gombroon is the property of Mrs. Vance, and is in the midst of a tract of 1,200 acres. The house is a beautiful one architecturally speaking, and its rooms are finished in a variety of natural hard woods not to be found perhaps in any other house in Western North Carolina. Water is supplied from a deliciously sweet spring on the mountain side, and is carried to every part of the house.

A Fine Garden.

A fine garden, magnificent orchard of young trees embracing almost every variety of fruit, and an ample yard of choice grapes all the work of the Senator's hand, give promise of good things to come.

Politics Now.

As to politics, of course the Senator is deeply interested. It is doubtful, however, whether he will be able to make any speeches during the present canvass. It is true that "one blast upon his bugle horn were worth a thousand men," but North Carolina cannot afford to have him endanger his life. If his improvement continues as rapidly at present, he may make a few speeches during the latter part of October. The Senator thus there is no doubt as to North Carolina's vote being cast for Cleveland. He thinks that most of those who have gone off after the Third party will see that they are endangering the life of our local State government by so doing, and will come back and stand squarely with the Democracy before November.

Relect Our Representative.

"The most important thing for the country and for the Democracy," said the Senator, "in the coming election, is the continued ascendancy of our party in the lower house of Congress. If the Republicans should secure the House (they now have the Senate) and Cleveland should be elected, they would be in a position to practically coerce the President at least to force through legislation despite his veto. It is of paramount importance that the Democrats should hold the purse strings during these times of pension extravagance, sub-treasury schemes, the buying of railroads, and the payment to the soldiers of the difference between greenbacks and gold. The present tariff law, with all its wrongs, might better stand for another ten years than the country be turned over to all these schemes for spoils and plunder."

Senator Vance walked around his garden and up to the rocky knoll near by, a distance of three quarters of a mile, and was not fatigued by the exert. The Senator does not know Exum, who is Exum, anyway?

GEO. A. SHUFORD.

What a Republican Organ Says of a Democratic Candidate. From the Asheville Register, (Republican). The editor of the Register is not a kicker, never was and never expects to be; but we sincerely hope the Republican convention, whatever action it may take as regards other offices to be filled this year, will make no nomination for Judge of the Superior court in this district. The Democratic party for once in its history, has nominated a man for that position who is in every way worthy of the support of every man in North Carolina. It has been our fortune to know George A. Shuford intimately from boyhood. Our knowledge of his purity of character, ability, integrity and moral worth is as complete as close personal and business relations of many years' standing can make it. He has our unqualified endorsement as a man of the highest integrity and honor. From the day of his entrance to Waynesville academy with us, seventeen years ago, we have known him, observed his manner of life and tried his actions, and all who know him will testify to the truthfulness of our testimony when we declare that never a word, nor a shadow of suspicion has ever been breathed against his good name. Born in Buncombe county, reared in Transylvania, and educated in our own beloved Haywood, he is widely known and universally respected as a man of an enviable record of unusual attainments and worth. But his crowning honor is the fact that those who know most of his private life, his business and personal habits, esteem him highest. Admitted to the bar in 1878, his public life began in the town of Waynesville, where he was one of this world's goodly; but with a firm reliance upon the elevating power of pluck, perseverance and push, he soon forged his way to the front rank in his profession, and maintained his position until the time of his appointment to the bench, no lawyer in this district enjoyed a larger or more lucrative practice than he did, or had more of the confidence of clients. Sober, upright and a God-loving Christian, he is a man of the people. The Democratic party wisely made him their choice by a unanimous nomination. The People's party, desiring one whose heart and life work are in sympathy with their every demand, would choose wisely in choosing him.

The Prohibitionists can find in him a living example of every demand they make, even to that of woman suffrage, for by remaining unmarried he is following some fair and lovely woman to suffer for want of a good husband. And the Republican party, the noblest, the purest, the best of them all, should practice what it preaches and take the best the country affords when it is in reach. "We know not what course others may pursue," but as for our individual part we shall support Mr. Shuford.

HER SECRET.

"Twas twilight, in the shadow of the porch. We sat and watched the coming of the moon, And when at last we saw night's silvery torch We both, regretted it had come so soon."

Then suddenly she jumped up from her seat, And with a cry, "I am in my grave!" I clasped into my breast the burden sweet, And gently urged her secret she would tell. She was a summer maiden, and I knew Full well she suffered not from love's attack.

And I thought, for when her breath she drew She gasped, "That horrid bug's crawled down my back."
