A TRIUMPHAL PROGRESS

GEN. STEVENSON'S JOURNEY TO RALEIGH.

Hickory Turned Herself Into a Committee of One and Gave the Vice Presidential Candidate a Royal Welcome—Same All Along the Line.

ON BOARD STEVENSON SPECIAL, SEPT. 16.—[Special.]—George Clark and R. K. D. engine No. 165, never drew over the Western North Carolina railroad a happier set of fellows, Republicans or Democrats, than they did the crowd that left Asheville on the Stevenson special at 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon. And Conductor L. A. Franzer, who has pulled the bell cord on many a "flyer" certainly never saw a crowd that had more fun than the Heel men. There was Paul H. Means, of Cabarrus, who is never jolly unless joking with somebody. Why, he told it all through the train that the special was to be held at Coopers on account of a telegram having been received from Hickory stating that supper could not be prepared at the inn before 10 o'clock, because the hens had not laid that day and the proprietors had to send out into the country to get some best. This was told for the benefit of J. G. Hall, a rampant Hickory Democrat, who takes nothing Third Partyish in his.

Manton H. Luther, the Chicago Here- old man, saw wood industriously and says what he has to say the same way. Then there's Joe Daniels, Theo. Kluttz and a whole lot in fact the whole "lay-out" is a stunner from A to Z. But, here, I am about to forget Joe Caldwell, the "Dr." of the Charlotte observer, who settled down to compiling a special to his paper as soon as he left Asheville, occasionally taking his mind off his work long enough to swear to one of Paul Means' jokes.

Along the Line.

The special train was composed of engine 165, R. and D., car 740, Pullman sleeper "Bipedia" and vestibule sleeper "Medway." At Biltmore, the first stopping place, nobody came out to see the train or the next vice-president, but at Coopers, there was a difference—a group of citizens gathered at the station and asked to see the General, who immediately left his car and stepped out and proceeded to shake the hand of every man in sight. "Gen. Stevenson this is Mr. Patton," "Mr. Patton, why sir, I am pleased to see you." And so it went around the group.

As the General climbed back on his car an admirer shouted out, "We are all Democrats here, and you'll get every vote." "Thank you, sir," came the reply, "I wish it could be that way the country over." While the train was standing here a lady from Waxahatchee, who is summering at Coopers came up and asked if she might see the General. For reply she was lifted into the car. As this was done, however, the rulle of her dress caught on the step and about two yards tipped off. She was not disconcerted, and marched bravely to the General with extended hand, remarking, "I wish I could be that way the country over." "Thank you, sir," came the reply, "I wish it could be that way the country over."

Some of the passengers had hoped that when the special reached Black Mountain all could see the face of "Our Joe," at the station. Gen. Stevenson himself expressed that hope. But it was not fulfilled. There was a crowd, however, among them Gen. R. B. Gooden, with a book on his face, and the air of one who wanted to yell for all he was worth. The train passed after a few seconds' stop, to get out of the west-bound main track.

"Anything You Say"

Julian S. Carr waited on Gen. Stevenson and asked if he would object to showing himself at several of the stations, just to gratify the people. "No, indeed," he replied, "just anything you say. I'll be glad to do anything that will give the people any pleasure."

"On the Car Platform" When the train left Black Mountain, Gen. and Mrs. Stevenson passed through the train and stationed themselves on the front platform of the first car, in order that they might get a better view of the mountain scenery. What they saw added, it possible, to their enthusiasm. Mrs. Stevenson especially could scarcely find words to express her delight as Royal Gorge and the other points of ever-attractive interest on the mountain spread out before them.

Old Fort had a pleasant surprise for the passengers. A good crowd of men, ladies and boys stood alongside the track with flags and banners flying and yells proceeding from every throat. Gen. Stevenson would have been less than human had he not responded to this outburst. He appeared on the platform shook the whole "kit and blin" by their several hands and made a short talk, in which he told them that he loved North Carolinians and had North Carolina blood in his veins. A huge boquet of willow-herb was presented to the General before the train pulled out, and when it did so it left every person cheering loud enough to fracture a lung. Night shut down shortly after Old Fort was left behind, and the passengers had nothing to do between stations except keep up their circulation and listen to the great-drumming exhaust of George Clark's huge bit of machinery.

At Marion several hundred people, and many of them the prettiest kind of girls, crowded around Gen. Stevenson's car and listened to a minute speech from a distinguished man. It was here that Maj. Robbins yelled from a car window to a friend on a platform that "We took thirty feet of old Pisgah and Black Mountain today yelling for Stevenson." At Morganton, there was a great big bonfire, and hundreds of people called Gen. Stevenson to the platform and howled themselves hoarse while he spoke. Comrades Springs came out to see the General, and having seen the man were willing to have the train leave, while they will go back to their work till elec-

At the close of the speaking a gorgeous fireworks display was set off. Hickory did herself and the county proud, and these were pointed a bright crimson.

Following the fire, support at the Inn Me and Mrs. Stevenson received some two hundred ladies of Catawba county in an informal reception in the parlors of the inn.

Senator M. W. Ransom, R. B. Glenn and Lee S. Overman spoke here this afternoon to a gathering estimated to be 750 persons. Special trains were run from Lenoir, Newton and other adjoining towns. Several Third party men, it is said, openly expressed their repudiation of the Third party line.

He says he will ship stock to England, the West Indies and other parts of the world.
