DONALD W. BAIN IS DEAD

HIS BRILLIANT SERVICES FOR THE STATE.

North Carolina Loses a Faithful and Especially Able Servant in the Death of Mr. Bain—His Character Portrayed by One Who Knew Him Well.

The long expected, but none the less distressing intelligence of the death of that valued and beloved man, State Treasurer Donald W. Bain, reached this city last night. It occurred in Raleigh at 5:35 yesterday afternoon after a lingering and prolonged illness, during which there were frequently such marked alternations as to give hope that his strong will and hopeful nature would in the end triumph, and that he would eventually come out conqueror over disease and death. But while his will and his hopefulness were strong, his constitution was feeble, and in the end he yielded to those forces more powerful than his resistance, and the State is again called almost before the sod has settled upon the grave of the late Chief Justice Merrimon, to mourn the loss of another public officer; and society, his church, his family and his friends to lament the departure of one whose place will some can never be filled; with all will leave a gap that time can only slowly fill.

Donald W. Bain has been a familiar figure in the place of his residence since early boyhood, even then looked upon as one destined to fill a conspicuous place in the public eye. And in fact that anticipation was early realized; for since early manhood he had been associated with the financial affairs of North Carolina in one or other relation, culminating in that long service in the Treasury Department for which his industry, his sagacity, his intelligence and his integrity gave him peculiar aptitude. An illustration of the value attached to his characteristics is given when a Republican administration succeeded that of Gov. Worth, under whom Mr. Bain was chief clerk in the Treasury office. Mr. D. A. Jenkins had been elected Treasurer, and there was loud immediate clamor for the removal of all Democratic subordinates from the places they held in the several departments. The chief clerkship in the Treasury Department was a much coveted prize, and Mr. Jenkins was persistently bent on removing Mr. Bain, but as a proper party measure and as a fitting subject of political reward.

Mr. Jenkins was a man of sense as well as a man of integrity. He realized the importance of having associated with him in his very responsible position one whose qualities had been thoroughly tested; one in whose integrity he could trust; in whose judgment he could confide; upon whose information he could rely; upon whose industry he could depend. He was unwilling to risk his own reputation upon the unproved, uncertain aid of partisan assistants; and Mr. Bain was retained; and unbroken harmony and unweakened confidence, and cordial good understanding were maintained between the chief and the subordinate until the close of Mr. Jenkins' term of service, by which time Mr. Bain had so commended himself to the people of North Carolina for his remarkable business qualities, and his admirable personal characteristics, that in the Democratic nominations for State officers in the campaign of 1884, the public and party eye was intuitively fixed upon Donald W. Bain as the man imperatively demanded for the position in which financial intelligence, official skill, comprehensive information, personal urbanity and unimpeachable integrity were united to meet all the requirements of public needs and expectations. Mr. Bain was elected; and never afterwards was there serious proposal of displacing him. As chief clerk of the Treasury he was promoted to party consideration. Term after term he had been called upon to retain his seat, with continued fresh development of his value and abilities. In his relation with the legislature during its sittings, his value was especially conspicuous. A call on him for information was so promptly and correctly responded to, that further application was rarely made. He was an infallible encyclopedia, with statutory knowledge, financial details and the bases upon which his responses, reports and suggestions were conveyed; and was so wise and so accurate that they were accepted always without qualification or discussion. He seemed presented as a special creation to which there could be no equal nor parallel, so promptly, so spontaneously, so accurately, and withal, so pleasantly were the results of his thoughts and the stores of his information displayed for the use and good of the State and the people.

Mr. Bain entered the service of the State in the office of the Comptroller under Governor Brogden in 1857, remaining in that capacity until appointed as chief clerk of the Treasury in 1855, which he retained until election as Treasurer in 1884. In January 1885 he was qualified as Treasurer, and was re-elected at the last general election. In another capacity he has been almost as long, as well, and as favorably known as in that of Public Treasurer. Since February, 1869, he had been Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of North Carolina, giving another and very conclusive evidence of the esteem in which he was held, personally and officially; for as in one office, so in the other, with all the mutations of events, parties and men, Donald W. Bain was firmly entrenched in the affections, reliance and confidence of men that he remained fixed and unmoved as if in testimony to the stability of the institutions he represented. As a religious man there was no brighter exemplar of the character the Christian faith is presumed to develop. He was humble, patient, sincere, consistent, earnest; and privately and publicly was a shining light in the Methodist Episcopal church, to which he attached himself in early life. He was prominent in the State and general councils of the church, and since 1883 had been secretary of the North Carolina annual conference, and was twice—in 1886 and 1890—a representative at the general conference. Of his personal life, his personal relations to family and friends, no more need be said than that they were such as might be expected from one in whom the capacious scrutiny of an exacting public had never been able to detect a flaw. Perfect as from W. H. Withers, commander, Raleigh, says that Mr. Bain's funeral will occur Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock, Most Worshipful Grand Master H. A. Gudgeon officiating.

RALEIGH, N. C., Nov. 17.—On account of the death of the State Treasurer and Chief Justice Merrimon the Democratic jubilee has been indefinitely postponed.

CLEVELAND TO TAMMANY

PLAIN, BRAVE WORDS SAID BEFORE ELECTION.

The President-Elect Would Make No Pledges to Any Men on Any Subject and Was Very Emphatic About It.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—The Brooklyn Eagle in an editorial strongly denies the published statement that at a dinner at the Victoria hotel at which Mr. Cleveland met Tammany leaders he made promises and stipulations to them in return for their support at his election.

The editorial says these politicians learned that Mr. Cleveland would make no promises or any thing of the sort to any of them; that he considered the ticket in this state a matter of much more importance to them than to him; that he repelled the idea that his democracy was questionable by them or doubted by any one, and that he would go to the election or to defeat equally free and absolutely uncommitted.

"Mr. Cleveland has not told me anything about the pledges he made," said Mr. Shearman, "but there happened to be a telephone in the room where that dinner was held which has conveyed to me what happened."

Mr. Sherman then pictured Lieut. Gov. Sheehan as addressing Mr. Cleveland on the subject of pledges, and said that Mr. Cleveland replied to Sheehan:

"Mr. Sheehan, I have listened with utmost attention to what you have said. I have followed you very carefully and I think I understand you perfectly, and what I have to say in reply, Mr. Sheehan, is that I will be damned before I pledge myself to any man on any subject, whatever, and I'll be doubly damned before I give to you those particular pledges for which you have asked at this particular time."

GO SLOWLY.

Advice From Far Away That May Be Good.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The Times commenting on the speeches of Dewey and Reid, at the New York Chamber of Commerce banquet on Thursday night says: "The eagerness of the defeated party to abrogate the McKinley law is itself sufficient to inspire the victors with caution. Mr. Cleveland has other and better reasons for delay. The McKinley tariff endorses the power of the body of capitalists and a number of working men, and although their forces were vanquished by overpowering movement of public opinion it is not desirable to make their defeat too painful and ruinous. A change from the most monstrous absurdities of McKinley to something like an endurable tariff will be slow and tentative; but it cannot be long postponed, nor can it be restricted within narrow bounds."

POST ELECTION TRAGEDIES.

Three Persons Killed and Fifteen Injured.

FAVETTEVILLE, Ark., Nov. 17.—The Democrats of Mountain View held an election celebration in the school house last night. During the speech making, and while the building was packed, two kegs of powder, put away for anvil firing, exploded. The school house was totally wrecked and most of its occupants buried in the ruins. A son and daughter of Silas Graham were taken out dead, and Berry Shroud has since died. Fifteen persons were injured, some fatally.

DECATUR, Ala., Nov. 17.—During the Democratic celebration last night a skyrocket exploded prematurely and struck Miss Jones, a beautiful young lady, in the left eye. It penetrated the brain, causing instant death.

QUARANTINE RULES.

A Steamship Prevented From Landing Her Passengers.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 17.—The steamship Indiana which arrived here from Liverpool yesterday, was prevented from landing her passengers, including 120 immigrants and twenty-eight occupants of the cabin, by the Treasury officials. The vessel had satisfactorily passed examination at both the Federal and the State quarantine, although it is claimed by the Board of Health that the release by the latter station was made without authority. When she arrived at her dock the custom officers took charge of her, and refused to allow her to make entry in the custom house. Their refusal was based upon the fact that the vessel had not observed the twenty day quarantine proclamation issued by President Harrison on September 1st.

GOV. FLOWER'S AXE.

It Falls On the Necks of Civil Service Commissioners.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 17.—Governor Flower has demanded the resignation of the civil service commissioners, Alex. C. Eustace, William A. Postel and John A. Schleier. The latter is the only Republican on the board. They were all appointed by Governor Hill. Treachery to their party is said to be the motive of the governor in the case of Democrats and offensive partisanship in the case of the Republican member. The commissioners are appointed by the governor and are removable at will.

A Spanish Newspaper's Sensation.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The Madrid correspondent of the Daily News says that a sensation has been created by an article in El Globo, Emilio Castelar's newspaper organ, accusing Canova's ministry of assisting, during the visit of the King and Queen of Portugal, to the conclusion of an alliance between the Spanish and Portuguese monarchs against the democratic parties and republican propaganda in their respective dominions.

Employees' Wages Increased.

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 15.—The Lonsdale company and the firm of B. B. & R. Knight notified their employees today of an increase in wages to go into effect December 5. This action will doubtless be followed by the other cotton manufacturers in the State.

A $150,000 Fire.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 17.—Early last evening flames were discovered in the rear of Koch and Loeber company's building, corner of West Water and Clayhome streets, and during the visit of the fire department the property valued at $150,000 was destroyed.
