OCEAN'S GRAVEYARD. bury, Delaware county, told a story THE WONDERFUL SARGASSO SEA OF about the millionaire's visit to his old home in the midst of one of his busiest THE GREAT ATLANTIC.

The Enormous Floating Semi-Island Toward Which Nearly Everything on the Mighty Deep Drifts and Is Held as Prisoner-Its Inhabitants.

For several years past the hydro-graphic bureau at Washington has been trying to acquire a more intimate knowladge of the movements of the waters of the ocean, and a great number of bottles, containing messages and securely corked, have been dropped overboard by vessels. Many of these have floated thousands of miles before they were picked up, and while some were washed upon native and foreign shores others have found their way into the great Sargasso sea. From the courses taken by these different bottles it has been found that the ocean currents move around in a vast circle. Those which were dropped overboard on the American coast took a northerly course, while those on the European side floated toward the south. Bottles dropped overboard in the North Atlantic started toward the northeast, and those from the African or Spanish coast floated almost directly west until they reached the West India islands.

The general directions of the currents were thus ascertained, showing that the waters acted upon by winds and currents circulated round and round like a In all pools floating objects are quick ly cast outside of the revolving currents, or they are carried with them in their circular route for some time until they are washed nearer the center or side of the pool. The bottles that were forced outside of the currents of the ocean were cast upon the shores of some country. but those which were worked toward the center eventually found their way in the calm waters of the Sargasso sea. Here they remain peacefully until picked up by some vessel, or until some storm casts them back into the great tary and alone the acres of waters, covered with the debris, stretch out as the vast graveyard of the ocean, seldom being visited by vessels or human beings.

Far from all trading routes of vessels, the sight of a sail or steamship is something unusual. The fishes of the sea form the chief life of those watery solitudes. Attracted by the vast quantities of wreckage floating in the sea, and also by the gulfweed on which many of them live, they swarm around in great numbers. The smaller fishes live in the intricate avenues formed by the seaweed, and the more ferocious denizens of the deep come hither to feed up on the quantities of small fish. In this way the submarine life of the Sargasso cemetery. A few of the long flyers of the air penetrate to the very middle of the ocean, but it is very rarely that this occurs. Some have been known to follow vessels across the ocean, keeping at a respectful distance from the stern.

Other birds have been swept out to sea by storms, and have finally sought refuge in the Sargasso sea. Still others,

There is sufficient food floating on the surface or to be obtained from the fishes which live among the forests of seaweed to support a large colony of birds. It is surmised that many of those found in the sea have inhabited those regions for years, partly from choice and partly from necessity. Birds swept out there by storms would not care to venture the long return trip to land, and finding an abundance of food and wrecks on which to rest and rear their young they might easily become contented with their

He ex-plained that he thought he had his book with him, so that he could give me a pass for myself and my wife down to York, but he must have forgotten it and left it at home. He said he'd send the pass to me; but if he sent it some other one must have got it, for I never did. I was a-speakin 'bout it afterward down at the hotel, and the boys said it was most likely Jay Gould never sent it. To cover many miles with success a man must, first of all, study his own condition, and while he makes his charger fit must not forget to render himself so too. He should carefully watch how his horse takes its food and vary the amount of it, the time of feed-ing and the nature of forage, so as to insure that the animal derives the max-imum amount of benefit from the nour-ishment it takes. Then he should endeaver by experi-ment to discover the pace which suits its conformation best and the most ju-dicious manner of varying it, so as to afford relief to the muscles and yet get over the ground. The particular pace that best suits the animal having been arrived at, it should be trained to go at that pace evenly and methodically and with the regularity of a machine. And care should be taken never to stretch the bow to the utmost, or the subsequent reaction will more than commethalance the present gain.-

"Deliver me from what some author has called the 'scavengers of daily con-versation,' who gather up the literary refuse on every side to offend the intel-lectual nostrils of the thoughtful." And Colonel Marcus Bauermann stretched himself in his chair and proceeded to ex-plain. "A dude with a thimbleful of brains won a basket of champagne from me on the bet that q-u-i-re meant a band of singers—which it does, though c-h-o-i-r is another way of spelling it—and ten minutes afterward a street car conductor used the word 'transpire' for 'perspire' and won a box of cigars from me on that.
