Distributing Time Tables. It is a fact not generally known that the furnishing of railroad time tab! s to the hotels of the city is performed by a regularly incorporated company, who make that work their sole occupation. Something had to be done to correct the evil of having old time tables in the coatroom and porters' closets of the hotels which gave nothing but misin-formation to the traveler, if indeed he could find any time table at all, and so the general passenger agent of one of the trunk line roads hit upon the scheme of forming a time table supply company. This was done about a year ago and has tow assumed large proportions. The profits in the business are considerable and come from the railroad companies. Some seventy or eighty of the prominent roads of the country are sub-scribers. They supply their folders and ime slips to the company and subscribe iberally for the work of having them distributed among the large hotels and other resorts of New York and Brooklyn.

The company furnishes each hotel with a neat rack, either stationary or revolving, and supports a delivery wagon and an agent, whose duty it is to make the rounds weekly, putting new time tables in place and replenishing the depleted supply. As a consequence it is a far easier and more certain matter to obtain accurate information in New York regarding the movements of western and southern trains than it ever was before, and every one who has waited for an hour or more at a lonesome railway station or has lost a half day through misinformation will bless the genius who invented a railway time table supply company.-New York Herald.

Old and Young.

We are clear that it is by no means the special defect of our time that the old do not enter heartily into the life of the Comparing the present generayoung. tion with generations past, we should say that one of the most distinctive notes of the present day is the sympathy of the old for the young-a sympathy which the young generally and rather heartily appreciate, but which they do not very often reciprocate. Instead of conversing so as to turn "the back of the conversation" toward the old, they usually expect and confidently expect that a good deal of its life and interest will be contributed by the old and are rather scandalized if he expectation be disappointed. In fact they habitually expect the old to be juvenile in their interests, and they are very much seldomer disappointed than the young people of forty or fifty years ago, if they had formed the same expectations (which they certainly did not often do), would have been. Just as the rich are now habitually expected (and very often justify the expectation) to find their deepest interest in alleviating the condition of the poor, so the old are now habitually expected to find their deepest interest in rendering the pursuits and pleasures of the young still more attract ive; nor do they very often disappoint ex-pectation.-London Spectator.

Bidden Treasure of British Royalty.

King John was both a seeker for and ider of treasure. We find him digging for treasure in Northumberland about the sites of the stations on the Roman wall, and he was reputed to have stores of treasure in his favorite strongholds. mewhere buried in the sandy estuaries of Lincolnshire are the golden crown and jewels of King John, with the chests of treasure that were carried in his train. But we speculate, too, about other hoards, chiefly buried beneath the foundations of his castle walls, the secret of which was lost in the sudden death of the greedy king. Again there is a royal treasure perhaps
