The Commissioners of the District of Columbia took po-session of the building in person and helped to direct the police and rescuers. Col. Corbin, assistant adjutant general of the army, was sent by Maj. Gen. Schofield to represent the War Department and to decide if it be necessary to call out the troops; but owing to the excellent police regulations the rescuers were not hindered in their work, and it was not long before the debris had been cleared away to such an extent that the work of rescue could be carried on without hindrance.
