SOMETHING OF INTEREST.

BRIGHT AND INSTRUCTIVE MISCELLANY FOR ALL CLASSES OF READERS.

ANTICIPATION.

One time we stood upon the water's edge
That flowed far out into its parent sea,
And there while summer blushed on field

We vowed to love throughout eternity. And thou, fond heart, hast kept that vow full well

Through every change that protean fortune brought,
But I am sunken in the waves that swell
O'er Seylla's hidden rocks—and am forgot.

What stern mischance hath snapped the golden thread
That bound thy heart-in unison with mine?
Unless her soul be Niobe's instead,
Whose tears may flow as feelingly as thine?

From whom may pardon come if not from And yet I dare not ask so great a boon.
Whose life is wrecked like thine? And who Hath warranty to sing so sad a tune? Yet cease those mournful sighs, as deep per-chance As ever Dido for Æncas heaved:

The future lies beyond; the recompense Of time is most for her who most bath grieved. One hope I have that absence cannot take, One longing that the world can never steal.
When life is done, in other spheres to wake,
And at thy feet a worshiper to kneel.
—St. George Best in Good Housekeeping.

One of the finest curtains in this country is at the Lyceum theater. On it all that art can do has been lavished. Made of a rich, beautiful plush of dragon's blood hue, it hangs from the proscenium arch in artistic folds. The curtain was presented to Mr. Irving by the Baroness Burdett Coutts, its cost being 1,000 guineas. One thousand yards of plush were used in its manufacture, and it achieved the fame of once being parodied in a Gaiety burlesque.

Mr. Wyndham's curtain at the Criterion is a creation of Maple & Co. and cost about £120. At the Gaiety the present act drop is the work of Mr. George Banks. The artist's conception takes the form of a great white satin cloth, with a solitary figure opening two curtains. The Savoy curtain is noted both for its beauty and the artistic manner in which it rises and reveals the stage. The act drop at the Adelphi, the home of "creepy" melodrama, is a curtain which has marked the resting places of countless pieces of the transpontine type. It represents a scene in Sherwood forest in the days of Robin Hood and his merry, merry men.-London Million.

Literary Men's Papers. He is a wise man who leaves behind him no letters or personal papers of any sort that mean much in the private history of his life, particularly if he is a literary man, for, more than all other hearts, the daws like to peck at those of men who are favored of fame. No Kissing In Japan.

There is in Japan no kissing, not even in the nursery. THE FIRST BUTTERFLY.

May, Sweet May. In the scented soft May breezes Forests don their kirtles green; All is melting, nothing freezes,

Flushes with auroral sheen;
Waking,
Breaking,
Hearts laugh out, with love aglow,
May, sweet May, will have it so.

Wintry bosoms, ne'er so dreary But the sunshine thrills them through;

Heavy spirits, ne or so weary
But are twinkling in their dew;
Laughing,
Quaffing,
Life in measure full, I trow,
May, sweet May, will have it so.

No more wax and wane and changing Seasonless and never ranging Such, dear love, my love for you, Yearning, Burning,

Or, as brook in even flow, May, sweet May, will have it so.

A Scene In the Attorney General's Office. Representative Wilson of West Virginia, whose distinguished position in the house entitles him to the utmost respect and consideration at the hands of any Democratic official, entered the office of the attorney general. The room was crowded with applicants for offices, and Mr. Olney was very much harrassed.
Mr. Wilson stepped forward to the attorney general's desk. Mr. Olney turned greatest number of ballots at the polls savagely upon him.

"Sir," he said, "you have come up out of your turn. You are doing an injus-tice to those who have been waiting here, and you will have to go back to the foot cess, but came through that success subof the line and await your turn."

His Solemn Oath. ▲ popular comedian tells a story of a waiter at a London restaurant who was sadly given to drink. A party of young men determined to reform him, and one day they read to him an imaginary paragraph from a paper relating a terrible accident in which an inebriate in blowing out a candle was killed by the flame igniting the alcoholic fumes of his breath. James pricked 1 his ears at this and requested that the paragraph might be read to him again, which was done, to the evident horror of the poor man, who immediately went in search
