Some members call it Wood, Eskridge & Oates, others Webb, Esk & Oatridge, while still others say Oakridge and Eskwood. The firm survives, however. Street Committee Put To Work

To the street committee the following matters were referred: The up-and-down streets; the inadequacy of the drain at the culvert on North Main street; the bill of B. A. Newland, $7, for steps made necessary by the lowering of Cherry street; the cause of overflow or water from Starues avenue into the basemen of Alderman Starnes' residence; the ques tion of benefit to the property of H C Jones on South Main street, and the in Wholesale : Trade ! struction of Corn & Troy as to wher curbing called for by their contract. THE BIG NIX.

Collaboration of the Wise Men o The Four Wards. The Board of Aldermen started off or a trot with the introduction of a buckster's or inance, drawn up by City At torney Sondley and recommended for passage by the committee recently appointed. The ordinance provided that all hucksters must pay a yearly license tax of $20, whether selling within or with out the market, and the idea is to make the rental in the market very low in order to keep hucksters therein. Before the ordinance was formally before the house, Mr. Jones started in on an argument, but was called down on a point of order. A motion to pass the ordinance on first reading was made, and Mr Jones then got in an argument, declaring that all dealers should be treated alike and that the city needs the money that could be derived from the taxes. J. M. Gudger took the floor and began a dissertation on free chickens. He was taken off this sidetrack by a point of order, and then delivered a ring argument against the ordinance With one foot on a chair rung and his pautaloons rolled up one section, he proclaimed that he did not want to see a tax put on hucksters, be-cause that would raise prices to the buyer, 'Why," declared he in that winning tone which captivated the spades," "the Czar of Russia dare not think of putting a license on salad." He comphasized his points with sundry graceful left-handed gestures, and his ery "Don't tax turnips!" touched every

Mr. Jones replied in a talk that was replete with humor and attempts to discover "where Mr. Gudger was at." The latter gentleman thus got another chance, and placed himself right, inci-dentally turning a few laughs against Mr. Jones, with interest. There was some further discussion, after which Mr. Starnes made a slight amendment and the ordinance passed on first read-ing, the negative votes being cast by Messrs. H. L. and J. M. Gudger. The

"I will not deliver the customary ad-dress this morning," he said, "but have asked Brother Baldwin to take my place for two reasons: First, because I have just arisen from a sick bed and do not feel able, and, second, because Brother Baldwin has been for several years so closely connected with the deceased as a friend, and in his relations with the Southside chapel."

When the Rev. Mr. Baldwin stepped to the pulpit he was evidently much af-fected, for his relations with Maj. Mc-Dowell and his family have been tenderly intimate. He said:
"If I could have followed my own in clinations and consulted my own feelings, my place this morning would have been, not at the desk, but in the congregation with the family and friends of the departed. But I have a painfu duty to perform for the living, and to offer, for the departed, the last solemi rites, a tribute of our respect. this large congregation gathered here in this sanctuary on the last day of the week? It is because a great, good and just man has passed away. A prince ha fallen in Israel. Last night's CITIZEN contained a long article testifying to Maj. McDowell's nobility and integrity of character. Perhaps there was never known a more perfect character, a more tenderly affectionate husband, father and friend. This morning when I asked his wished me to say in my remarks he said: 'O, what a tather we have lost He was always true, always just, but he never in his life spoke an unkind word to

"What a testimony is this! Of how few of us could these words be said! I have been so intimately associated with the departed and with his family for the last two years that I realize the bitterness of such a loss, the depth of their affliction "We can hardly realize that he is gone We shall meet here Sabbath after Sabbath and note his absence. Mr. Campbell offered a short closing prayer full of comforting promise, the services at the church closed with the singing of the hymn it was Maj. Mc Dowell's custom to sing every Sunday evening: "One swertly solemn thought Comes to me o'er and o'er. Nearer my God to thee Than e'er I've been before."
