They allow the way to the old depot were simply, in the way to the old depot were simply, the had weather, the commonest country roads, and good for little except to try men's souls, and complaint was constantly being made to the city authorities for relief. In short, Ashoville was then "in the soup," which being mater preted means mud.

But all this is now but a memory in the great transformation that Ashey like has undergone. Patton avenue, once an eyesore to man and heast, has been payed its entire length with brick, connecting at the Buttrick block with the granite paying on West Haywood street, and giving a payed roadway from the square to Smith's bridge over the French Broad. Patton avenue also compets with Depot street, which is payed with Belgian block its whole length, making the transportation of freight a thing of comparative ease. North Main street has been payed with brick as far out as Chestnut street, and will no longer provoke words of vexation or arget as the But all this is now but a memory in teams come over it. In addition to all this, Asheville's im-provement in sanitary matters is a cause for congratulation. Two sanitary officers have charge of the work and the city is cleanlier than it has ever been before, a fact that can be detected by any observer. The main streets are cleaned daily. To shorten what might be made a lang narrative, Asheville has kept school of the procession in the march of progress as the great heart of the Landof the Sky the "Switzerland of America," should do. Here the sector for health, rest, and pleasure may be satisfied. Asheville's latch string is always on the outside, and she bids the world come and see
