The pur-chaser was the Minnesota Iron compaofficers of which are connected with the Illinois Steel company, which is largely owned by the Rockefellers, and they are said to be the men forming the pool. They have immense interests in this section of the country, and the idea is to get control of the best mines.

There is to be a revolution in the plan of working the mines. In all other min-ing districts of the world the ore is found in a pitched vein at an angle of 45 deg In the Iron King and other mines the vein lies flat, and at a depth of 25 feet from the surface. It is now proposed to use immense steam shevels for the removal of the surface. This will reduce the cost of mining greatly.
