HARD ON LING GUN'S TRAIL

"CITIZENS" MAN FINDS SOME OF HIS CLOTHES.

The Poor Old Chinaman Was Struggling on Towards Knoxville When His Reason Seemed To Have Left Him—Talks With Those Who Saw Him.

IN WOLF CREEK MOUNTAIN, seven miles from Paint Rock—Sunday night—[Special]—Your correspondent found Ling Gun's thin, big-sleeved jacket on Slate Knob, one mile below here, at 1 o'clock today.

In half an hour the party had the two strips of black cloth that had been seen tied around the Chinaman's feet; also his heavy, short coat and his outside blue trousers.

The garments were wet and frozen.
The articles were found in the course toward Knoxville.

The country is wild and rough, and the search slow because of a thick undergrowth. Cabins are miles apart.

At daylight the trail will be taken up again if the weather permits.

LING GUN'S WANDERINGS.

Talks With Those Who Last Saw the Chinaman.

PAINT ROCK, Nov. 26.—[Special]—The story of the wanderings of Ling Gun, and of his sufferings and final disappearance from human sight, as tracked by THE CITIZEN correspondent and Rame Sander, the guide, for the past 24 hours, is one of misery and wretchedness, rub-bery and outrage.

On Friday evening, Nov. 3, between sundown and dark, Conductor Thomas Dula, of the E. T. & G. railroad, stopped his train at the iron bridge a mile below Paint Rock and put off Ling Gun, a Chinaman, who had refused to pay his fare.

Directly opposite the Chinney Rock on the French Broad, a hundred yards from the river in front and the same distance from the iron bridge, is the cabin that sister Nancy Williams, her two little boys and a young woman of questionable character named Little Truman.

And this is the tale the women tell: A little while after the train stopped at the bridge on Friday night, when it was just coming dark, a man walked into the cabin, and Nancy and the boys were badly scared. At first sight in the dim light, they thought he was a negro, but as he came closer, they saw that they saw he was what they call "Chingy," and he asked: "Me stay tonight?" Nancy said "No," but the man sat on the bed and pulled off a queer looking pair of frozen shoes, soiled with wooden bottoms. The 8 years old boy played with the shoes while "Chingy" rested on the bed. The man then gave Nancy a piece of yellow rail road iron with writing on it and the woman said the writing said that the Chinaman had been out of the train because he would not pay his fare. It was given to her put away in a "cattish" pocketbook.

The old man then pulled up his coat front and from a curious pocket took out several handfuls of money, laid it on the bed and counted it till he had $152. Then the money was put back in the strange pocket. Little Truham and a man named Green Kelly came in the shack at this time, and after satisfying their curiosity about the strange appearing visitor, Green asked why he did not go to Paint Rock and buy a ticket? The man said he had money but preferred to foot it to Knoxville, and Nancy told Green about the shining handfuls of silver that had just been counted on the bed. Green then left.

Nancy's little George says that Green pushed the old man on the bed and took his money and "gunny" took some too, but the old man does not let the particular visit of the old man to the house when this occurred. The Chinaman reminded with the women and departed, and the first chapter of Ling Gun's experience at Nancy Williams' ended.

The Next Chapter.

About 10 o'clock Saturday morning Walter Correll, a son of J. O. A. Correll and nephew of Capt. M. J. Fagg of Asheville, was in the road in front of his father's farm house two miles from Paint Rock, on the old State road, when he called to folks in the house to come and see an funny looking man, it was Ling. He came up and gave the boy a piece of salmon colored paper and asked to have it read. The paper was so badly soiled that the writing could not be deciphered and it was given to a big lot of chickens in the road going to be fed and the boy and Chinaman struck up quite a friendship while watching the fowls. Ling's neat appearance and pleasant manner was noted by others at the house. When he passed up the road he got out of sight, but in about two hours came back and left right on toward Paint Rock.

The Chinaman to get from Nancy Williams' to Mr. Correll's might have taken the path through the woods over the mountain, and the parties talked with are of opinion that this was his route rather than by Paint Rock.

And now the shadows close in toward Ling Gun.

Mrs. Eva Morris, the wife of Bob Morris, who was jailed at Marshall this week on an alleged charge of murdering the mother of the Chinaman, was at her father, Joe Ward's house, a quarter of a mile from her own home at sundown the following Monday, and accompanied by two brothers, 11 years of age, got into her doorway, when she was startled at the sight of a strangely dressed dark man close by the house, who, when she saw the party approaching, she fled away, and as she got nearly there she fainted and fell to the ground. The little chaps screamed that a man had "killed Eva," and the mother-in-law and one rushed out and carried the prostrate woman to the house. Ling followed and sat on a log near by. He was ordered away and left, keeping in the road toward Paint Rock.

Frank Lamb, with his wife, lives a quarter of a mile from the Morris resi-denes, and while it was yet light enough to distinguish plainly the Lamb heard Carter Ward calling loudly that "Eva was killed." When the outside of the house was reached they were horrified to see the Carter boy and Wade Lawren "slicing" dogs on an old man. In their hands were rocks ready to be thrown, and Bob Morris was running coming up with a drawn pistol. The old man fell on his knees before Lamb and putting up his hands plead for protection with heartrending moans. Morris presented the pistol at the Chinaman, saying he was going to kill him.

For securing his wife.

Mrs. Lamb prevented Morris from coming by the threat. Ling Gun started off and Z. W. Morris, the father of Bob, and Lamb followed down the road and caught up with him in a field not far away, when he had thrown his rest. Mrs. Lamb took down some food and her husband bathed his wounds with liniment while Ling ate and drank the people's cents. Night was fully on by this time and the refugee thanked his helpers and with a "good bye" was gone.

John Williams told James Arwood and Mark Cuthall late on Sunday afternoon about "Chingy" and his money.

Returns To Nancy Williams.

The whereabouts of the Chinaman all day Sunday are not accounted for. A little after dark on Sunday night a knock at Nancy Williams' door was followed by the entrance of the head of Ling Gun.

Who asked "Is this Knokey?" [Knoxville]. His former acquaintances were recognized and he moved away, saying that he would soon return. In 15 minutes he came into the house without shoes and his feet were blue with cold and mud.

His arm had marks of a dog's bite. He showed a knot on his head as big as a hen's egg, and opened his shirt and exhibited a bad laceration on his breast, which he said had been made by an axe handle.

His ankles and feet were badly swollen and he told how he had been beaten and robbed by a man and a woman. Nancy saw the marks of a woman's hand on his face because of the way Ling told it.

He staid in the house half an hour and went away. About midnight the women were wakened by the noise of the rattling of the door and groans. The door was opened and in came the old fellow dripping wet, with his outside trousers in his hands.

He was shivering and seemed to be about frozen. While drying his clothes he took off a black cloth belt and put $3.35 in it out of a leather belt, also worn. Nancy asked about the money and he said all that he had left. After he got warm and dry he got into a bed and staid till just daylight when he left, going up the track.

At about 10 o'clock Sunday morning, at the Grassy creek road, 3 1/2 miles from Paint Rock, was awakened by his wife who said somebody was grooming outside.

Tom opened the door and Ling Gun was found "shaking" on the step. He was helped inside, put in a chair and a warming fire was built, which soon thawed him. His pitiable condition awakened the sympathy of the kind hearted people and Mrs. Lamb cooked some food and gave it to the sufferer, but the latter refused to touch it until he had offered money for it. The money was not taken and the Chinaman put it in the hand of one of the children in his father's arms and said "come." The food was eaten and Ling got sleepy. He said he wanted to go to "Knokey" and Lamb told him to stay with him till daylight and he would go to the station with him, but the old man absolutely refused to go toward the railroad any more and remained through the mountains. He continued to daze until 4:30 o'clock and then said he must go, which he did.

While doing the slightest noise would cause the old fellow to jump almost out of his chair. Mr. and Mrs. Lamb said that Ling Gun was polite and seemed very grateful for their kindness. He played with the baby and touched their heart's with his tender care of the child.

Where?

Under the mountain called the State Line Ridge, a few minutes' walk from where the Grassy creek road stops, Jasper Williams lives. As near as Mr.
Williams can tell it was 9 o'clock Tuesday morning when Ling Gun came to his house, barefooted, in the rain, and pointing to the northwest tried to say "Knokey." His face was dirty and his clothing appeared much worn. Without hesitating the Chinaman to accept a pair of shoes and food, but Ling shook his head and kept on muttering "Knoxville" and moving in his direction. He was watched until he crawled slowly over a fence on a ridge and went out of sight, in feeble efforts, in the edge of woods which, if followed, are almost impenetrable for strong men.

Frank Lamb and wife made hunts for the missing man several days, but found no trace from Jasper Williams.

Newsom Mace, while hunting in the Brushy mountains last week heard screams that led him to believe they had been made by a human being, but the hunter was unable to definitely ascertain the source of the cries.

Pete Ellenberg, a half-witted boy near Paint Rock, saw Nancy Williams take money out of a satchel-like contrivance on a belt last Saturday, and says he will swear to the statement.

Tim Crittens in his wanderings after Guncame upon a clock still in its warehouse in the mountains where it was possible for the wanderer to have got in out of the weather as both had open doors.

Sam Wills found human foot tracks in soft ground on the banks of Bear branch last week as he was going through the woods to Wolf Creek.

Bob Morris told Newsom Mace that he was sorry he had not killed the — who had scared his wife, and that the run upon him again he would kill him. Morris tried to borrow bullet mounds and bullets from Mace.

Stewart Lamb, a witness in the case, was taken suddenly ill on Monday last and died in two hours. His sister, Mrs.
Wills, living three miles distant, heard of the death and in a few hours, on the same day, she too died.

The people generally deprecate the frenzied treatment of the Chinaman and are hoping that alive or dead he may be found.

DEMOCRATIC TARIFF BILL

MORE LIKE PLATFORM DE-MANDS THAN EXPECTED.

A Free List of Importance—The Burden Lightened on the Poor Man's Necessities—Unique Compromise on the Sugar Bounty—The Farmer Remembered.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—The new Democratic tariff bill was given to the public today, and its provisions fulfill every expectation of those who predicted a radical reform. In many respects it is a surprise even to the Democratic members of Congress, as it is unprecedented in many of its provisions. The free list is of that liberal scope sufficient to satisfy the most radical advocates of drastic reform, and a repudiation of the principle of reciprocity, decisive and emphatic.

Thus, the tariff bill, in addition to the reforms it makes in the custom laws, will necessitate an immediate readjustment of the treaties of those South American countries which enjoy practical or theoretical reciprocity with the United States.

One of the tenets of Democracy, which found frequent iteration in the last two campaigns, is the subject of a compromise in the adjustment of sugar schedules. The bounty which was to be repealed at once is, instead, to be repealed by easy gradations, and will not reach its conclusive effect until after the end of the present century. It is to be reduced one-quarter of a cent each year for eight years. The following summary of the bill has been prepared by Representative Bryan of Nebraska:

"The bill repeals the bounty on wool, coal, lumber, salt and iron ore on the free list, and reduces the tariff on sugar from one-half to one-quarter of a cent per pound. It also provides for the extinction of the bounty by degrees.

As a rule the tariff has been made lowest upon the cheaper goods of necessary use, and highest upon the more expensive articles. The new schedule will perhaps attract the most attention. We have left no duty higher than 45 per cent. on the manufacture of wool, and the duty on raw wool is generally, for average beings less than 40 per cent. The average quality of blankets and flannels are taxed only 25 per cent, and the lower grades of carpets only 20.

"We also applied a gradual reduction to the woolen schedule so that at the end of five years the highest duty will be 40 and the average near 30 per cent. The material reductions have been made in the cotton schedule. We have placed iron ore on the free list and made a large cut along the metals schedule. The duty on steel rails is reduced more than 50 per cent. Free lumber will be a great benefit to the people of the remote States, and free salt will give to those who need salt for their cattle or for curing meat the same advantages which have been secured heretofore by means of a rebate.

As to those who cannot do without Agricultural implements have been placed upon the free list in order to enable farmers to better compete in foreign markets and become more independent of foreign implements are being sold abroad today cheaper than at home."

LEIGH WOOD.

The North christians lacked Proper Coaching.

New York, Nov. 27.—Lehigh added another victory to her football record Saturday and her victims were 14 study men from the University of North Carolina. It was no walk-over which the Lehigh men had there was good material against them and it was team work more than feel which won the victory.
The game was played before a small but decidedly appreciative audience.

It was clearly shown in the game of Saturday that the men from the South were lacking in proper coaching. Their ideas of team work were crude. It was a one-man game for most of the time, with no wind, no air and no wet grounds.
The score at the end of the first half was Lehigh 15, Tar Heels 0. Total score, Lehigh 34, Tar Heels 0.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 27.—Vale once more demonstrated her supremacy in football by defeating the Harvard 11 on Hammond Park Saturday. It was a mighty contest and was won by the smallest possible margin, only one touchdown being made. The score was a repetition of that of last year, 6-0, and the game, if possible, was even more closely contested than a year ago.

Driven Back by Collision.
New York, Nov. 27.—The steamer Nacoochee, Capt. Smith, which arrived at this port last night, while proceeding to sea from Savannah was in collision with the British steamer Strathavon, the latter struck her on the starboard side about the fore rigging. The Nacoo-chee will go on dock for repairs. The Strathavon returned to Savannah.

Italian Cabinet Making.
ROME, Nov. 27.—King Humbert has chosen Signor Giuseppe Zanardelli, president of the Chamber of Deputies, with the formation of a cabinet.

A general order goes into effect this
