Not the least interesting feature of the place is the barracks, where is quartered a portion of Hippolyte's valfant army, says a Hayti correspondent of the Providence Journal. Right in the midst of a jungle of wild trees and bushes I found traces of an old orange and mango grove, indicated by the remains of straight rows in which there trees were originally planted. And with the decline and rain of the plantations has declined everything in connection with them. Even the old carriage roads which originally traversed the island and formed a channel for conveying the produce to the ports are now only bridle paths, being completely over-grown with forest and bushes. And this is Hayti, the III-paniola of Columbus, the pride and glory of the great admiral! The children, with a few exceptions, grow up in absolute ignorance, and with a deep, inborn hatred of the white man. THORN OF GLASTONEURY.

Miraculous Stories Told of the Tree Which Blooms on Christmas.

At Glastonbury Abbey, in Somersets shire. England, once stood a thorn tree which, it is wid, bloomed every Christmas morning. The first authentic account of it ever written was in 1772 by a visitor who tells of it in the account of his visit to the abbey.

The keeper assured him that St. Joseph of Arimathea landed not far from the town, at a place where there was formerly an oak that had been planted to his memory; that he and his companions marched to a hill and rested themselves, and that Joseph stuck his staff on the ground. Now this staff was a common dry haw thorn stick, but it grew and first came into full flower on Christmas day. Afterward MILTON HARDING the tree, which had thus grown and udded like Auron's rod, always doomed on the day of our Lord's nativity and upon no other day, the flower, like those of the night-blooming cereus, lasting but a few hours.

Many queer stories have been told of the "Miraculous Thorn of Glastonbury." It was said that if the chips from it were planted they would sprout and grow like potatoes; that the leaves Block and would ask his friends in particu- cured all inflammations, swellings, etc., lar and the public generally to give him and that "rods" cut from it would never leave marks on the children cordec4d3mos rected by their use.

KING OF THE GULF.

The Delident and Ills Home Among the Motley Crowds of Bushire. Fundame is the capital of the English atectorate in the Persian gulf. Here our resident lives, who may be styled ising of the gulf, and before whom all pertry potentates along its shores by they on the Arabian or Persian side low down. He has, his steam yacht and his steam launch provided for him, British man-of-war is appointed to he always in readiness to do his biddings, and the British residency, with its flagstaff and extensive compounds is by far the most conspicuous building in the town, says the Fortnightly

Bushire is a truly horrible place, built at the edge of a split of sand run-ning out into the gulf. Its population They are armed, however, with fairly good markets, and many of them earry ugly looking knives. I saw large numbers of the "soldiers" on the plaza or bank, English telegraph, English steamers, agents and English men-of-ward superstances, some playing at dice or there sleeping wire. Bushire is as English as could war, Bushire is as English as could be wished. Lawn tennis may be is very mongrel-Arabs, Persians, Hin-

Karoun route is opened out into the heart of Persia, Bushire will cease to be the seat of our resident, and the capital of our Persian gulf protectorate will be removed to Fao or some other spot which has not yet got a name. I that time ever comes, and Bushire ceases to be the chief outlet for the Persian caravan trade, the place will not long survive, for it has no pretensions whatseever to call itself a harbor. Big steamers have to anchor at least two miles off land outside a sandbar, and if the seals very rough, landing is next to impossible. Bushire chances to be the outlet for the roads across the Kotals, and if it ceases to be that its reason for existence will cease also.

IMPROVING THE EYES.

Country Life Is the Best Antidote for

Nearsightedness. It is satisfactory to be told by Mr. Ellis that blindness in England is "slowly decreasing," says the Spectator, though Great Britain still stands in this respect behind two other Euro pean countries, and three more come before Ireland. Shortsightedness, however, appears to be increasing everywhere, Germany having a signal and sinister preeminence in this re-

A French doctor has noted the remarkable fact that wild beasts caught quite young or born in captivity become short-lighted, the conclusion being that the eye adapts itself to its habitual sphere of vision, and unless "educated," to use Mr. Eilis' term, to see objeets at a distance, loses the capacity and best. And have, when under French rule, it was one of the fairest and wealthiest spots in the civilized world.

The whole republic, in fact, is a gigantic farce. No nation has ever shown itself more utterly incomplete of self-group rupes. It is thus within the experience of the present writer that his sight greatly improved in days gone by, when he ly improved in days gone by, when he became a volunteer, by practice at the butts, so that while at first he could not see the target to shoot at without spectacles at the three-hundred-yard range, after a twelvemouth or so he only needed to put on spectacles at four hundred yards. But beyond that range he was never able to dispense with them.

Country excursions are therefore extremely valuable as means of strength-ening the sight of town-bred children and the conductors of such excursions should take pains to direct the eyes of the children to distant objects-to the landmark, noting, if possible, any incapacity to discern the selected object, and then selecting some nearer one for the weaker-sighted.

KILLIES AND THEIR FOES.

Not Only Fish, Fowl and Man Devour But Even Chickens Pillage Them. "He doesn't mind a little thing like that," said the deacon, kindly, as he passed his hook through the skin behind the back fin of the killie and cast minnow, hook and sinker the length of his line to try the effect of a fresh bait. thin, and remain thin just in "If the snappers don't bite any better than they've been doing he'll be swimming as lively as ever when we pull up anchor to go home. Look at those killies in the bait box. Nothing damper about them than some seaweed since morning, and they'll all be ready to wim away if they stay till to-morrow.

"They are tough and hardy little fellows and no mistake," he continued, lifting the seaweed to look admiringly at the wriggling little stumptailed fish packed like sardines in the box. "They seem to have been created for the good of others. Everything preys on killies, from men who bait their hooks with them or eat the minnows as white bait, down to the gulls and herons and among the grass every full tide. with all this keeping after them they don't thin them out that anyone can see. Why, the very chickens along shore will run from a dough trough for the sake of eating killies' eggs." "Hold on a minute, deacon," said the reporter, who was the plous mariner's fishing companion that day. "I grant all the rest you say, but please explain how chickens manage to get at the killies' eggs. If you'd said ducks or geese, I could understand it."

An Old-Time Ocean Fiyer.

It is a fact not generally known that the United States government label placed on every box of imported eigars sold in this country bears a fine steel plate engraving of the steamer City of Washington, a sister ship to the illfated City of Boston, and noted in her duy as an ocean fiver. In the year 1861 the City of Washington, then plying between New York and Liverpool. covered the passage to the westward, in January, in fourteen days, tifteen hours; April, twelve days, twenty-one hours: May, thirteen days, twenty-one hours; July, thirteen days; August, thirteen days; September, thirteen days, twenty hours, and December, fifteen days, ten hours. In December, 1862, she made the trip from Sandy Hook to Queenstown in what was then the remarkably fast time of nine days. nineteen hours and thirty seconds. The City of London rande several passages to the eastward in 1863 and 1864 in less thun old hdays.

"Ethel, dear," said Mabel, insinuatingly, "is there any reason why one should talk all through a private musicale when one wouldn't at a concert?" Ethel (an offender in this particular)-"Good heavens! Yes! Why one pays for a concert,"—N. Y. World.
