The assembly was made to the music of the Washington Post march in the spacious dining ball, and under the softened lights of the elegant interior the toast master and his chosen coterie became most bospitable entertainers. The speech of welcome was made on behalf of the club by Nathanie! Sherburne Rogers. Inviting a discussion of the menu Mr Rogers said: "Fellow bachelors and brothers in sin-gle bleasedness: past bachelors, those of you who are unfortunate enough to merit that title; marriageable and unmar-riageable girls!—We have gathered to-gether to perform the last sad rites over two of that merry party that assembled here a year ago tonight; to tender them some slight token of our love and es-teem, and to wish them well in their journey adown the dark and mysterious pathway of married life. It has been their custom on every anniversary of their embarkation in business to gather together a genial company of their brother bachelors and in thankfulness celebrate in fitting style around the fes-tive board their deliverance unscathed from the snares and arrows of Cupid. But the festive board will never see another such gathering. Never more will the bauquet of the bachelors be graced by their presence. By a power that we cannot comprehend they have been ruthlessly torn from our midst, and now, as from the highest mount of Beulabland, they pityingly gaze on such of us as are trying to peer iato that mys-terious future which is already theirs. Nonight we gather to wish them well and to live over the happy hours of the past. We have arranged a program which will please you all and at the same time assist in the work of diges-tion, and we have also arranged an extinguisher which we shall not hesi-tate to use on any crator who becomes tiresome. We shall use it in good faith and friendship and no one will take

The Toasis.

The Toasts. The third page of the program was given up to a surprise list of toasts that was heartily enjoyed as a joke of the management. The list included: "The Experience of a Married Man."-

"How I Won My Suit."-Edwin Rumbough, "Woman, Lovely Woman."-Robert

"How I Learned to Waltz."-E. C. "A Love Making Formula,"-Dr. C. S.

"The Feelings of a Love Sick Swain. -B. Moseley Jones.
"Learning How to Love."-Geo. R.

During the service of the dainty collation Toastmaster Rogers proposed as sentiments, "The New Members of the Firm of Raysor & Smith" and "The Firm's Prosperity," which were happily responded by Nic. A. Raysor and White G. Smith.

The regular toasts and responses that followed were: "The Bachelor," by C. A. Webb; "Asheville," Mayor T. W. Patton; "Oid Maids," in eloquent silence, by E. B. Lewis: "The Wondrous Change in Married Men," L. P. McLoud; "Who is the Druggists Best Friend?" Dr. C. S. "It is understood that Mr. Gilmer has lorden; "The Investigation of Mess." Jordan; "The Investigation of Matri-mony From a Lover's Environment," Harry Rumbough, and "The Well Wishes of the Great Majority" by Major E. P.

The quintette, Messrs, W. E. and G. R. Collins, J. G. Simpson, T. A. Jones and Roy Denison favored the company with vocal selections so excellently well ren-dered that the chairman's admonition of "no encores allowed" was unani-mousi; unheeded. Bad Accident on a South Carolina Rallway.

Washington, Jan. 17 .- In an accident at a railroad crossing near Chester, S. C., early this morning five passengers were injured: F. H. Spears, Pittsburg, scalp wound; J. H. Hoffman, New York, wrist burned; Mrs. M. E. Carty, Washington, D. C., elbow cut; G. D. McCarty, Washington, D. C., several bruises; J. T. Wilson, Pittsburg, back hurt; Pullman Conductor Davis, bruised about head, and car cut.

The accident occurred at 12:38 this morning. The Richmond and Danville fast mail No. 35 was crossing the Georgia, Carolina and Northern tracks an was run into by a freight train on the latter road, which struck the Pullman car on the front trucks. The sleeper was overturned and it is marvellous every occupant was not killed. Will Take a New Position
