BEING A MAN MONKEY.

A Mechanical Tail Has Been Devised, Which Greatly Facilitates the Business. I had a chat the other morning with Mr. Arnold and the brothers Donaldson, the monkey performers and contortionists, says a writer in Pearson's Weekly. It has long been the ambition of acrobats to invent a useful mechanical tail, without which no man can properly imitate a monkey. At length the tail has been devised. Arnold and the Donaldsons are the only people in the secret, and they now hang and swing by their tails, to the disgust of rival man monkeys. So like the original are their antics and their whole get-up that from a distance it is impossible to tell, as they swing from bars and ropes inside a cage, that they are not apes. The acrobats they use alone cost fifteen dollars apiece, and are so naturally made that they have even deluded the real animal. Let one of my informants speak for the trio: "Before we could attempt to imitate a monkey in public we went through a course of the closest study in various zoological gardens. It was months before we were proficient; but then we did not consider ourselves so until, having donned our monkey's dress, I approached a cage of real apes, one of whom actually came to the bars and scratched my head. "An acrobat and contortionist has to crowd all his work into a short space of time, for after he has reached thirty-two years of age his work begins to deteriorate. We experience no difficulty whatever about blood rushing to the head. When we began to train we could only hang our heads down for half a minute, and even then we were nearly suffocated. Now we can hang for ten minutes and feel no ill effects. The great thing is to get the cords of the legs to stretch, which they do gradually, and to loosen the hips. So long as the cords of the leg will give, almost anything can be done with them. For instance, we find it quite easy to cross the right leg over the left, and finally crowd the toes under the arms—a feat that looks exceedingly difficult. "A great deal depends upon the backbone. By constant practice it can be made to bend like whalebone to the shape of the letter C, either backward or forward. One of our troupe can spin on his head, but that trick came to him naturally and it is impossible to teach it. The chief ailments which befall acrobats are strains and the dislocation of the hips."

PAPER CAR WHEELS.

How They Are Made and Their Advantage on Passenger Coaches. On all the first-class passenger cars paper wheels are used. The paper wheel consists of a paper core, or center, between two steel plates one-fourth inch thick, bolted together through one flange on the iron hub and another on the steel tire, the flanges being on opposite sides of the wheel, so that the core can not get out of place. The paper used consists of good strawboard. The sheets of millboard are laid on a table in piles and have their upper surfaces pasted by boys with ordinary flour paste. They are piled in lots of thirteen, and an un-pasted sheet is put between the lots, so that the mass of paper readily falls apart into a thickness of four inches, making it as hard as oak. After the blocks are thoroughly seasoned they are forced and turned in lathes and forced by about one hundred and twenty tons pressure into the steel tires, which are two inches thick and bored tapering one and one-half degrees. The hub is forced with a pressure of about thirty tons; it is turned straight and three-sixteenths inches larger than the hole in the paper. The bolt holes are drilled and the bolts forced in by steam hammers. The life of one of these wheels is from five hundred thousand to eight hundred thousand miles. They are said to intercept vibration and so prevent granulation of the axles, etc.—Philadelphia Item

MIKE WAS CAUTIOUS.

And Hurd a Valuable Book for Fear of its Falling into Bad Hands. The secretary of an eastern rubber company, at Trenton, N. Y., lost a letter book containing copies of a month's important correspondence a few weeks ago, says the New York World. The whole office force was turned out to hunt for it, but it had disappeared as effectually as though swallowed up in the earth. After closing hours the general manager and a couple of clerks sat in the office discussing the loss and trying to account for it. Mike, the new watchman, came in to sweep and dust. "Mike, have you ever seen anything of letter book No. 9?" asked the manager. "No, sir," said Mike. "Well, have you seen a book like this?" taking another letter book from the safe. "Yes, sir; I seen one like that one night. It was in the waste basket." "Where is it now?" "In the safe." "If ever a watchman received a lecture for stupidity Mike got it then. The manager became better and better every minute as he talked. "I suppose you would burn up the cash book if you ever found it outside the safe?" he shouted finally. "No, sir; I would not," returned Mike, gently. "What would I do for you, when there's nothing but figures in it that don't mean anything" but to the man that wrote 'em? I wasn't going to burn this book at first, because I wanted to keep the nice papers to put tobacco in. But when I thought, well, perhaps some one will get a hold of it and read something that was none of their d-d business, I just burned it to make sure. You'd do the same, sir, now, wouldn't you?" "—Queen Elizabeth was not the angelic creature represented in the histories and poems of her own times. Her hair was red, her temper red hot. She sometimes drank too much, and at any provocation would carry on like a trooper. She frequently raved at her maids, and sometimes struck, kicked and pinched them."
