THE POLITICAL SITUATION
In the Levant as Related to Mission Work
An address by the Rev. T. R. Sampson at the Student Volunteer Movement meeting at Detroit, Mich.
In order to deal with this subject intelligently, it will be necessary first to describe the situation. Then we shall be in a position to consider the effects which that situation may produce, and finally what that situation may demand in those who undertake mission work where it prevails.

mentally Americans, as missionaries, leaders, teachers, organizers and trainers, while the natives of the various nationalities, will be the most effective evangelists and pastors, and to them the whole work will ultimately be transferred, so soon and so rapidly as they develop ability to govern and support themselves. No other nation is at liberty to send missionaries to work as Americans can. The political interest of each European nation, as well as the relation of church and State, would immediately produce complications. This is universally recognized and the existence of the Turkish Mission Aid society in London, to help this American work, is a most impressive confession of the weakness.

Dinner's Ready!
Turkey, turkey, gobbly gee,
Roasted brown as brown can be,
Liver mixed up hot by hot
And a nice sweet gravy made of it.
Turkeys for profitable catering.

FRIDAY, MARCH 9, 1894.
WITH the mal-odorous federal election laws repealed, the tariff bill before the Senate, and almost ready for its passage, and the Bland seigniorage bill likely to pass, the days for Republicans howling hard times and worse coming are about passed. The Democratic party will redeem its pledges to the people in due time, and discontent will vanish.

The situation is different from that found in any other country in which mission work is carried on. In Japan and China, for instance, we find a homogeneous population, with a native government, in India, a heterogeneous population with an alien government, but a government which is stable and just. In the Levant, however, we find a heterogeneous population, a government alien to many of the nationalities within its borders, and a government which, like the Turk, its originator, is simply "unspeakable" in its injustice, tyranny and inhumanity.

When should this necessary work be done? Now. It is impossible to say what condition will succeed the present. But whatever the difficulties now, they will certainly be increased in the future, should either Russia or Austria succeed Turkey in any portion of the territory. The conduct of both Greece and Serbia, towards mission work, leads us to expect little grace from them, and if Bulgaria has been less jealous and hostile, it is that the mission work was so firmly established already, in schools and churches, within her borders, before she attained any measure of her independence.

WILLIAM THOMAS STEAD, late editor of the Pall Mall Gazette, London, England, and at present presiding over the English edition of the Review of Reviews, sailed for home Wednesday morning, after a stay of four months in the United States. The ladies of Chicago will have a sigh of relief at the departure of a man who shocked the upper crust of that city almost into fits by his remarks at a meeting called by themselves for the purpose of hearing him speak. As Mr. Stead wrote a book on life in Chicago while here, which has not yet been issued from the printer, it is more than probable that another shock will be felt when his impressions appear in cold type.

The condition of the Turkish empire more particularly is most fitly represented as that of a body in unstable equilibrium, an inverted pyramid which rests upon its apex. But even the attenuated base is still being vigorously diminished, by the constant efforts of pygmy enemies, the "infant liberties," as Mr. Gladstone terms the Greek, Servian, Bulgarian and Rumanian governments, and of its own corrupt and venal officials. Its fall would be inevitable, imminent and fatal to the greatest or greatest powers of Europe, England, Russia, France and Austria, which, standing behind the pygmies, each steady the unstable body, by pulling it vigorously from opposite sides, each having his own commercial, political or religious interests to conserve. For religion and politics are inseparable in all the East.

The brevity of this tenure of life is expressed by the familiar term "sick man," whose life is only sustained or prolonged by stimulants, or electric shocks administered by his doctors, all attendant legions until each return to his will or else a few coupons from his bonds.

New York papers record an incident in connection with the sudden rise in sugar stocks on Wall street on Tuesday. A prominent commission house received a certified check from a new client who wanted to open a speculative account. The check was accompanied by an order to buy 1,000 shares of sugar and "stop the loss" at three per cent. The stock was bought on his order and sold out on the "stop order" a few minutes later. The broker telegraphed the purchase and sale to his customer, whose first venture in Wall street cost him about $2,000 in five minutes. And thus is proven the truthfulness of the saying, "experience is a dear teacher, but fools will learn no other way."

The effects produced by this situation may be said to afford:
1. Peculiar advantages for mission work, and 2. The decayed Christian churches. The Moslem at first only contemptuous of all religions, but his own, has been tolerant towards other creeds, from necessity, since the taking of Constantinople and the concessions then made. After 1854 he was forced to grant a measure of religious liberty to other or religious questions. The minds and hearts of the people are turned constantly towards the political horizon, watching the reappearance of the borealis, or some new turn of the kaleidoscope.

"If the Democrats put through the income tax, call me a Republican." Thus does the New York Sun begin an editorial in which it goes on to declare that a tidal wave of indignation will sweep over that city should the Democratic party require its four hundred millionaires to pay their just portion of the money with which to run the government. If the Democratic party is no bigger than New York city, and no broader than New York city, and no broader than New York city, it is time for a tidal wave to engulf it. Let the Democratic party do right, and pass the Wilson bill with the income tax attached, and if New York city, and even New York state, wants to drop out of ranks, there will be other Democrats to take their place who love justice and hate a bog.

These evils have been intensively aggravated during the last few years, at the instigation of Russia. The Turk himself, at first only contemptuous, has, as the Christian communities have advanced in intelligence, power and wealth, become suspicious and even not a little fearful.

NOTICE—State of North Carolina, county of Buncombe. By virtue of the power vested in me by virtue of a deed in trust executed to me on the 30th day of April, A. D. 1890, by R. H.
