A QUESTION FOR TILLMAN

A COUSIN OF THE MURDERED NORMENT ASKS IT

"Why Don't You Obey The Law, Yourself, Governor?" - Mayor of Darlington Talks Military Guard Withdraws.

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 3.—Governor Tillman addressed the troops and volunteer country men in front of the state house at noon today. He declared that the law should be obeyed and said he intended to issue a proclamation tomorrow assuming control of the municipal police in every town in the State.

THE MAYOR'S STATEMENT

THE MAYOR'S STATEMENT TO THE PRESS.—The constables who were here are all now in either Charleston or Columbia. Those who arrived in Charleston last night left their arms in the woods. The mayor is postponing till Wednesday.

"I know of no law in this country that allows an officer of the State to commit murder and be exempt from arrest. These constables have shot to death two citizens of the State and wounded several others. As soon as the fact was known to me as Mayor of this town, I endeavored to have them apprehended, believing it my duty to do so. Such efforts to arrest the escaping murderers were made as have ever been done in this State, or under a civil government. Bosses were immediately organized, as has been done time and again, and pursuit was commenced as soon as possible. They were armed as best they could be under the circumstances, because they knew that they had an organized body of desperate men, armed with the most improved weapons, to encounter.

"As a matter of fact, I had no idea that the constables would be willing to submit to the authority of the law, because Governor Tillman had instructed them to shoot down citizens whenever they interfered with them, and he caused these instructions to be published to the world, and I did not expect that our posse would even wish to arrest them, but that they would, if caught up with, have to fight to a finish. There was no great superior force at first, and there was considerable unsuccess on account of the treachery of our towns, who were sent in all directions and who were armed with only shot guns, some with pistols and one or two with rifles. The delay in getting a posse enabled the State constables to gain considerable time in getting ahead, and night coming on enabled them to escape in the darkness, our men following them until they got beyond the county line and were then immediately called in.

"If Governor Tillman has made any attempt to arrest those men I am not aware of it. If such murders had been committed by any one else, or by any other persons than these State constables, I suppose he would have issued a proclamation offering a reward for the apprehension of an armed band of murderers.

LYNCHED AT BAKERSVILLE

HAL ENGLISH STRUNG UP TO AN APPLE TREE

He Was Accused of the Murder of His Wife—Hanged on the Evidence of a Woman Who Said He Had Tried to Have Her Poison Mrs. English.

MADISON, N. C., April 3.—[Special.]—The village of Bakersville was thrown into a state of excitement Sunday morning by the appearance of an infuriated mob of citizens who gathered there to lynch Hal English, who murdered his wife Ellen, on Sunday, March 25, by brutally beating her, and then throwing her body into North Toe river.

English married his wife a year ago. They separated soon afterwards, however, and he had recently been visiting her for the purpose, it is now said, of killing her in order that he could marry another woman.

On the evening she was murdered English asked her to have a walk with him, and they went to the river. After dark the neighbors heard the screams of a woman. Mrs. English not returning that night her friends instituted a search next morning and found the body in the river terribly bruised and broken.

MAKING THE QUERE

A Pair of Alleged Counterletters Subject to a Hearing

On the 27th of March two men came to Asheville and secured board at the house of M. M. Dougherty on Depot street, near the Glen Rock. To Mr. Dougherty they gave their names as Curtis and Dalton and told him they were employed in the machine shop of Woody & Kimberly and were making $2 a day. Yesterday Mr. Dougherty became suspicious that the men were going to jump a board bill and go to Knoxville, and he had a warrant sworn out for the men. Deputy Sheriff Morgan went out on the case, but could not find the men, although he learned that they were not working for Woody & Kimberly. The officer became suspicious of a deeper game than board bill jumping and, notifying Deputy Sheriff Hampton, the two went to Mr. Dougherty's early in the evening. There the men were nabbed. As Deputy Morgan caught his man he noticed him throw something into the fireplace. A search showed that it was a counterfeit half dollar. Deputy Hampton's man had two halves and a nickel, all counterfeit.

The men said their names were W. L. Morgan and J. J. Pruner. Their entire outfit was captured. It consisted of moulds for halves and nickels, the moulds made from plaster paris, a quantity of metal, a spoon for pouring, and a paper sack of plaster paris. A copy of the New York Weekly showed that the men had been perusing some of the thrilling stories therein. The "quere" taken from them was only $1.25.

A pair of "loaded crap" dice in the outfit indicated that Morgan and Pruner were ready for a "cum seben" game. The men were taken to jail and spent the night, and this morning were before United States Commissioner Sumner on a charge of counterfeiting. In default of bond they were recommitted to await the next term of the United States court. Pruner and Morgan say they have been in Winston, Spartanburg and Greenville lately, and carried a number of citizens from the Greenville Saw works. A letter is Morgan's pocket indicates that he is from Winston, and has a family there, the letter evidently being from his wife. He told the officers he had been in a similar trouble at Winston. Pruner is evidently a Texas man, as an envelope found in his pocket bore on it the business card of a man named Pruner at Palmer, Texas.

BRECKINRIDGE HARD HIT

HIS TESTIMONY APPARENTLY IMPEACHED

A Typewriter Who Addressed Letters For Breckinridge To Miss Pollard at a Time When He Said He Was Not Communicating With Her.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—The mystery of an alleged letter beginning "My Dear Sister Louise" pervaded everything about the Circuit court this morning when the trial of the Pollard-Breckinridge case began. When court adjourned yesterday afternoon, Judge Wilson, Miss Pollard's attorney, was trying to make Breckinridge say that in 1886 he had taken to be copied by a typewriter in the capital a letter beginning "My Dear Sister Louise." Breckinridge denied all knowledge of such a letter, and he also said he had no "Dear Sister Louise." Judge Wilson further asked him if he had not taken to this same typewriter a bundle of envelopes to be addressed to Miss Pollard, 76 North Upper street, Lexington, Ky., and Breckinridge denied this also.

The period when the alleged letter is supposed to have been written was covered in the statement of Breckinridge that he had no relations and no correspondence with Miss Pollard in 1886. Additional interest was given to the name "Louise" in the alleged letter because Miss Pollard claims that Louise Wilson was her assumed name, when in Cincinnati in 1885. Judge Wilson said that the name of the typewriter who copied the Sister Louise letter which, however, he was unable to produce, was Mrs. Louise Lowell, and this morning when court convened, Mrs. Lowell, who is now a clerk in the Treasury, was present with a friend. They sat next to Miss Pollard and Miss Ellis. Butterworth asked Judge Bradley to decide whether the evidence about the Sister Louise letter was competent. Wilson in answer said he proposed to put the witness, Louise Lowell on the stand on the ground that the plaintiff was not in possession of knowledge she now had at the time of her testimony in chief. It was not the purpose of the plaintiff, he said, to play any trick or to take the defense by surprise, and the defendant would be given every opportunity to make any explanation he chose concerning the letter. Carls said he did not learn the name of the witness, and did not see her until Sunday morning. Butterworth said he was not criticizing counsel, but thought the alleged contents of the alleged letter should not be placed in evidence until it was known what the plaintiff expected to prove by it.

Judge Bradley, in rendering his decision referred to the question as a "novel situation," and said he had found authority for the introduction of a document that might be lost or destroyed. He therefore decided that proof tending to prove that such a letter as that beginning "my dear sister Louise" existed might be introduced.
