ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE FUNERAL WEDNESDAY.

The big bell of the town clock away up in the court house tower is muffled, and its solemn, subdued tones as it tolls the hour find an echo in the saddened hearts of thousands in this Senator Vance's old home. Flags are at half mast over the government building, the Battery Park hotel, and the First National bank. The emblem of mourning is pinned about the court house, the City Hall, the Battery Park, the Carolina Club building, and other houses. It is a time of sadness to North Carolina and peculiarly to Buncombe county, and the people here show by their faces how keenly they feel the loss that has come upon the State.

The news of Senator Vance's serious illness was first conveyed to Asheville in a telegram from Hon. J. S. Henderson to Postmaster Kerr. The first dispatch giving news of the death of the Senator was sent late Saturday night by Senator Matt W. Ransom to Gen. Robt. E. Vance, brother of the dead Senator. Telegrams were also received by Collector Carter, Mayor Patton, Hon. H. A. Gudger and others.

As soon as Mayor Patton heard the news he gave instructions for the draping of the court house and City Hall and ready hands were soon engaged in the sorrowful work. On the court house the draping is over the front of the second and third stories and the balcony. Midway on the front railing of the balcony are crossed Stars and Stripes, fastened with a ribbon of crape, while just under them hangs the G. A. R. flag, bearing the claret hands and the words "Our Country, Our People." In the central window on the third floor, surrounded by a wreath of lilies, is the portrait of the dead Senator that for years has occupied a position on the wall of the court room, above the judge's desk. The draping on the City Hall is tastefully done.

Memorial Service.

A memorial service was arranged to be held at the First Baptist church at 4:30 yesterday afternoon. The death of the Senator was announced in several of the churches, and Rev. Dr. Jas. Atkins prayed for the family of the deceased at Central M. E. church, South, at the morning service. This was the first intimation many people had of the death. The First Baptist church was packed at the memorial service in the afternoon. The railing back of the pulpit was draped. Mayor Patton presided over the meeting and in his opening talk said it was hard, when the heart was bowed down under the weight of a great grief, to say "Thy will be done," and asked Pastor J. L. White to read from the Scriptures and lead in prayer to Almighty God to give all strength to yield a ready obedience to His will.

Mr. White read the 131st Psalm, following with prayer, in which he said: "We bless thee for great, good and true men who have labored for the upbuilding of man and country, men who have been faithful in church and state. We thank thee for the life and service of Senator Vance—for his strength of body and of mind, and for his faithfulness in the position in which thou placed him. We praise thee for his example, against which there is nothing. Now that thou hast taken him from us, help us to say 'Thy will be done,' and raise up some one upon whom his mantle may fall and who may take up his grand life work where he has laid it down. Bless his family, the country which he loved, and the nation which he faithfully served. And so keep us that when he is missed we will be prepared for a blessed immortality. Amen."

Mayor Patton then, with a few appropriate remarks on the love in which Senator Vance was held, called for expressions from men who had been warm friends of the honored dead.

Hon. H. A. Gudger was the first speaker. He said that, without design, it was exceedingly appropriate that the meeting should be held in this church. "Where this edifice stands," he said, "once stood the little office where the distinguished man began his career. And just in rear of the church was the residence in which he and his young wife lived. In his death North Carolina has indeed lost a star, a patriot, a statesman and a great christian. It is hard for us to understand why the Hand has been laid upon him, but we must say 'Thy will be done.' In childhood he was my friend, and there is one side of his character that I will refer to and that I perhaps know better than any other. That is his christian character. Fifteen years ago, in Raleigh, when the greatest cloud that can come over man, the death of his wife, came over him, I saw him when he had gone to his room asking to be left alone. I saw him take down the old Bible and read passage after passage. I have seen him in his own home when night and morning he would thank God for his blessings. How well do I remember the last time I was at his house, when he committed me and my family to His care. There is one lesson we may learn in this hour: As he was true to himself and his country so should we be true to ourselves."

Maj. W. H. Malone followed Mr. Gudger. Said he: "The great star that has so long shone so brightly in the galaxy of Southern statesmen has gone down forever. The Senate chamber is wrapped in the habiliments of mourning for the great man. But so locality can appreciate the great loss as can the people of Buncombe, where he first saw the light. In the days that tried men's souls he left his position of honor and went to battle for the cause of the people's rights."

could be placed on his tomb than "He Died On Duty. Though his place be filled by the noblest, the people can never forget the name of Zebulon B. Vance."

In opening his address Capt. M. E. Carter suggested that when the meeting adjourned it be to meet again the latter part of the week, so as to give the people from all parts of the country an opportunity to be present, and also suggested the appointment of committees on resolutions and arrangements, and an honorary committee that shall meet the funeral train at Salisbury or Greensboro, Continuing, Capt. Carter said: "I knew the Senator perhaps as well as anyone did. While in the Legislature I had the honor to vote for him twice, and I have never had cause to regret it. I will undertake to say that he was always actuated by the highest motives in what he did. He was not a politician in the common acceptance of the term, but he was proud of his State and was anxious that she should make a record that would last for all time. Thirty-one years ago when I was at home on a furlough, I attended a gathering at the Asheville Female college, at which Landon C. Hayes, the famous Tennessean, made an address. Referring to Mr. Vance the great orator said, 'There must be a spot on the sun, a blur on the moon, a mote on the lily, but on the fair name of Zebulon B. Vance there is not a single blemish.' Those words are just as true today, and I can pronounce no higher eulogy than that."

Mayor Patton called for an expression from Alderman J. M. Gudger, who was in Senator Vance's old company, the Rough and Ready Guards. As Mr. Gudger arose he lost control of his feelings and wept as a heartbroken child. It was a minute or more before he could command his voice. "If," he said, "I were asked why Senator Vance had such a hold on the people I should say, because he had such a large heart. I knew him intimately, and at our last meeting he was as he had always been, true, candid, and large hearted. In 1861 Capt. Vance led 108 of us out of this town. Out of those 108—100 or 110, recruits and all—there are 30 alive now. We all knew him and those who knew him best loved him most. As strong a religious lesson as was ever taught me, was when he was living in Raleigh, a widower. I stayed all night with him. Before retiring he read a chapter from the Bible and prayed. When he arose he said: 'My wife's teachings did not bear fruit in her lifetime, but she triumphed in death.' I heard his first political speech, and from my standpoint his single never sounded an uncertain or false note—it meant honesty, earnestness and sincerity. He bared his breast in war for his country and State. She rewards him in her tears today."

Col. A. F. Davidson followed, with the prayer that because of their relationship it might not be appropriate for him to allude to Senator Vance's transcendent character. "We come," he said, "to mourn our friend, our Senator. I speak of him as 'our Senator' because he was peculiarly ours. He was born in the shadow of our hills, nurtured and brought up here. He was a boy of remarkable talents, decision of character and energy of thought. I never knew such a remarkable man. His humility was great. He loved the laboring classes, and it was not demagoguery with him. His great heart went out in love of his people. We must bury him here. We must ask respect fully and affectionately of his wife and family the privilege of burying him here. As he sleeps in our cemetery, by the waters of the French Broad, let the requiem be: Here lies my son, who was a patriot and a statesman. 'Tis not all of death to die. Those of us who live in the faith may expect to meet him in the better land."

W. W. Jones seconded Col. Davidson's suggestion that a resolution requesting that the remains be buried here be sent to the family from the meeting, and the resolution was adopted.

Mayor Patton then announced the following committees:

On resolutions—Capt. M. E. Carter, Judge Chas. A. Moore, M. J. Bearden, Joseph E. Dickerson and W. H. Malone.

On arrangements—W. R. Whitson, W. A. Blair and J. H. Tucker.

The meeting then adjourned to meet again after the Senator's burial.

HONORARY COMMITTEE.

Gentlemen Appointed to Meet the Funeral Train.

Fellow Citizens of Asheville: Our hearts are stirred by one impulse, to do all honor to our friend, our townsman, our Governor, and our Senator, Zebulon B. Vance. There is no need for your Mayor to urge you to give appropriate expression to your feelings. That may be safely left to your own loving hearts. We loved him. We honored him. He deserved both our love and our respect. Therefore, this is resolve to believed by all men. Many telegrams of condolence have been received by the family, and among the callers at the residence were Vice-President Stevenson, Speaker Crisp, members of the cabinet, and a great many Senators and members of Congress.

Rev. Dr. Moses D. Hoge of Richmond, and Rev. Dr. A. W. Pitzer of Washington will officiate at Senator Vance's funeral. The funeral train will arrive at Asheville Wednesday morning, a special train going west for the purpose from Salisbury. The interment will take place the same morning, so as to give the opportunity for the return of the escort. The hour will be arranged there by friends. The honorary pallbearers of the Senate are Messrs. Harris, McPherson, Morrill and Sherman. Gen. W. R. Cox will be with the escort.

At 4 p. m. Sunday the North Carolina delegation met at Senator Ransom's room at the Metropolitan hotel. Senator Ransom presided, and Representative Henderson was secretary. Messrs. Henderson, Woodard, Alexander and Bower were appointed to draft resolutions expressing the sense of loss over the Senator's death, and Messrs. Alexander, Henderson and Crawford were recommended to be appointed by the Speaker as an escort of the remains. All the other North Carolina members will go, if they can be excused by the House, at least as far as Raleigh. The Senate will be represented by an escort of Senators, including Blackburn and George, with Senator Ransom as chief of the Congressional escort.

The Senate met at 12 and after announcement of the death by Senator Ransom adjourned until 4 p. m., when the funeral service was held in the Senate chamber. The House also adjourned and was present at the funeral in the Senate.

The body was taken soon after noon to the marble room of the Senate and was brought into the chamber at 4 o'clock.

A meeting of citizens of North Carolina was held, and everybody will go to the depot to see the funeral party leave Washington. Among the North Carolinians who will go with the funeral party is Mr. George P. Pell for the United Press. A Raleigh committee of escort is expected. Mr. Charles M. Busbee came today as advance.

Governor Carr telegraphed Mrs. Vance requesting to have the remains lie in State in Raleigh. Accordingly the plan has been changed and the special train with a special car for the family, placed at his service by the Seaboard line, will leave the 60th street depot tonight at 10:43 or seven minutes later and reach Raleigh next morning at 10 o'clock. The body will lie in state at the capitol until 4 or 5 o'clock that afternoon, and then be carried to Asheville.

Mrs. Governor Carr will accompany the family to Raleigh. Deputy Sergeant-At-Arms Arthur Barnes of the Senate, assisted by Col. Erwin of Charlotte, as an officer of the House, will have charge of the party.
