VANCE

We are pained beyond expression to announce the death of North Carolina's great Senator, Zebulon Baird Vance, in Washington City, Saturday night, at 11 o'clock. He received a stroke of apoplexy at noon on Saturday, which rendered him unconscious, and in this condition he lingered until death came to his relief. His devoted wife, and other relations and friends, were present when he died.

While the death of Senator Vance was not wholly unexpected, this community suffered a great shock when the sad news came yesterday morning. Everybody realized that a great and terrible calamity had overtaken the country. It was indeed creditable to our human nature, that men of all parties were to be seen in clusters, here and there, over the city, engaged in the most serious and earnest discussion of the virtues of the noble life just closed. All joined in tributes of praise of the honored son of our honored soil. The emblems of mourning with which the public buildings were immediately draped, and the great spontaneous meeting of citizens at the First Baptist church in the afternoon, attested the sentiments of our people in the hour of their overwhelming sorrow.

We will not attempt, in the presence of death, an adequate tribute to the life and character of the great commander who has gone to his reward. In due season, however, a faithful record of his glorious deeds will be made by friendly hands, and it will be a record of which all true North Carolinians will be proud, and that shall be a guide and an inspiration to all the coming ages.

Who was Senator Vance, and what service did he render, that a whole State should mourn his death? That question no living man can fully answer.

He was born and educated among the common people and was their loving friend to the day of his death. He proved this in every act of his life. As our great war governor, he championed the cause of the people, whether they were in the heated hall or at home. He not only tried to feed and clothe his people, but their liberties were safeguarded with loyal care. Who does not remember his glorious ship, the Advance, that brought so many ship loads of clothing from abroad for our gallant soldiers, and so many thousands of cotton cards for the soldiers' wives at home? And though he sent more soldiers to battle for the Confederacy than other war governors in the South, he was always on the alert to protect his people from all encroachments from the authorities at Richmond or elsewhere in the Confederacy. "Thus far and no farther," he would boldly say to them when occasion required, but when the fortunes of war seemed to be against the South, he went among the soldiers in his army, and by his inimitable speeches, aroused these soldiers to the very highest pitch of enthusiasm. It may almost be said, that he literally turned the tide of battle and made it possible for Lee's army to win the imperishable laurels with which it is crowned.

Had our war governor died when the war ended, what North Carolinian would have a deeper hold upon the gratitude and love of his people? He had proved equal to all situations—and is not that the true test?

But Zebulon Baird Vance was destined to achieve even greater honors, in peace than had come to him in war. He was to be the leader of his people in their struggles against the tyranny of military government and the hungry hordes of strangers who represented and ruled the people of his native State from 1863 to 1870.

With what shame all true North Carolinians witnessed the spoliation of the liberties of the people during the dark period just mentioned! If we had been humiliated by the result of the war, our humiliation was more complete now. We were literally in the wilderness of despair. And from that wilderness we needed to be led by a wise and safe hand. Who should do it? Some advised submission to the powers that controlled—that we kiss the hand that smote us—but there was one living, true son of the State who would not allow his people to go down in the dirt, let the consequences be what they might! Zebulon Baird Vance was that son, and nobly and gloriously he sounded the bugle-blast that summoned his people to their duty. While other leaders were groping in the dark, not knowing which way to lead, Vance clearly saw the path of honor and safety, and with the Constitution of his country as his guide he boldly proclaimed to the world, that though his people had been over-run and ruined by the war, they were still a liberty-loving people and would not tamely submit to the rule of their oppressors.

It is needless to say that under his leadership, the State was rescued from its enemies; and from 1870, down to the hour of his death, the great Commoner saw none but the rule he had established, bringing in its train, countless blessings to his beloved people.

We have said that Vance loved his people, and we would rejoice if our limited space would allow us to offer the many evidences of the fact that we could easily produce. But we will say now, that our great leader felt from the time he entered upon his life's work, that the masses were the victims of unjust and oppressive legislation by the National Congress, by which the few were always being enriched at the expense of the many. This firm conviction on his part was really the incentive and explanation of his political conduct through life. He was no politician in the common acceptance of the word. Though intensely popular he did not strive to win the plaudits of the people, except as he should deserve them on account of faithful service. His personal aggrandizement was not the controlling motive with him, but the good of the people was the great aim and object of his life. Actuated always by this standard of statesmanship, is it to be wondered that he was so much beloved?

SILLY EXAGGERATION

The Democratic Party Not Responsible for the Panic

It is a silly exaggeration to say that the Democratic administration of the country has lost five thousand millions of dollars in shrinkage of values—more than the cost of the civil war.

This is an exaggerated statement, a hyperbole not corroborated by facts, yet it is a statement which has done much to injure the Democratic party. It is a statement which has done much to injure the Democratic party. It is a statement which has done much to injure the Democratic party. It is a statement which has done much to injure the Democratic party.

COKE A CANDIDATE

Financially Able to Cope With Richmond Pearson

Cox, Frank Cox will be a candidate for Congress in the Ninth. He is a man of wealth and influence and has the ability to represent this district with credit. We believe him to be the only man who is financially able to cope with the great colossal combination candidate Richmond Pearson.

It is an anomaly that third parties, sore-headed Democrats will support the great triple-headed duke of Richmond. This together with the Republican vote makes Pearson a very strong candidate.

He being a shrewd man whose highest ambition is to go to Congress, will use the "rich" vote rather recklessly. Col. Cox is a popular man with the masses and poorer class, and is the man, in our opinion, to roll up a large Democratic majority in the Ninth.

Hill Opposed to Tariff Bill

What asks the New York boss is that he is opposed to any tariff reform at all, outside of a vague cutting down of some of the nameless McKinley extremes. He opposes the Republican protectionists, his state's objection to the income tax shows this. He is opposed to it because it gives room for tariff tax reduction, and tariff taxes, he tells us, protect or keep up the wages of American workmen. Tariff reduction means wage reduction to the foreign level. This is all in line with the approved high tariff view as commonly spoken. Hill is against all tariff reform.

Got His Name

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN, copying the Landmark's item about the Gin township man who wants Stevens for President in '96 comments thus: "The Landmark should have given the name of this Old man. He has sense and common sense. The pure and unadorned Democracy of the whole country will never get an entirely satisfactory President out of New York State."

Unnecessary Announcement

We think that Senator Hill's speech has not been generally understood by the protected press. It was merely his way—always an indirect way—of announcing that he has finally given up his vain ambition to be nominated for President by the Democratic party.

The Citizen from Girlhood to Womanhood is fraught with dangers. At this period the young woman is especially sensitive, and many nervous troubles, which continue through life, have their origin at this time. If there be pain, headache, and nervous disturbances, or the general health not good, the judicious use of medicine should be employed. Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best tonic and nerve at this time. The best bodily condition results from its use. It is a remedy specially indicated for those delicate weaknesses and derangements that afflict women-kind at one period or another. For all women, at all times of life, in all cases of peculiar nature, the "Prescription" is the safe agent that builds up, strengthens, and cures. In catarrhal inflammation, in chronic disorders and displacements common to women, it is guaranteed to benefit or cure, or the money is refunded. Dr. Sago's Remedy positively cures Catarrh. Dr. McGivra Here. Dr. McGivra has decided to remain another week, and until April 22nd, may be found at the office of Dr. J. H. JUST IN NORTH CAROLINA.

J. H. Walton, general merchant at Garner, Wake county, has assigned, I. P. Gulley being the assignee. The failure is a small one.

—David McAllister, a wealthy merchant of Wake, fell or leaped from the third floor of a hotel at Fayetteville and was fatally hurt.

—Mr. A. F. Fuge, who invited Mr. Moody, the evangelist, to visit Raleigh, has a letter from him in which he says his engagements will not permit him to come.

—It is decided that the corner stone of the North Carolina Confederate monument should be laid May 21 by the inmates of the Confederate Soldiers' home, assisted by the other veterans who are expected to be present in great numbers.

—The North Carolina Press convention executive committee has decided to hold the next annual convention in Morganton, May 23 and 24. Morganton is a beautiful, flourishing and wide-awake town, and will extend the editors a hearty welcome.

—Arrangements have been perfected for the holding of the State university summer school, July 2 to 28. The faculty will be composed of 10, including three ladies. Pupils of both sexes will be admitted and there will be a wide range of study.

—The following new cotton mills are in course of construction: Two near Kings Mountain, one near Patterson, in Cabarrus county, one at Statesville. The latter will have 200 looms. The capacity of the Anora mills, at Burlington, is being doubled by the addition of 8,000 spindles.

—McKlenburg county Farmers' alliance adopted resolutions requesting Senator Vance, Congressman Alexander, and others to prevent any further issue of bonds, and say: "We ask no assistance from Senator Kansom, as we do not feel that he represents the views of the laboring class in North Carolina, or is in sympathy with it."

—Many convicts are now at work on the great dam of the Governor's mansion. The tracks, which were recently coaxed, with one exception, been removed. The grounds are being graded and graded. The interior of the mansion is very beautiful. In the dining room is an exquisite buffet, which in 1860, was purchased by Governor Ellis.

—The sale of the Raleigh street railway was to have taken place at noon Saturday. At that hour Mr. H. P. Gray, the commissioner, announced that an upset bid of $25,000 would be required, and that unless such bid was made under an order signed last Thursday by Judge Seymour of the Federal court, the sale would be postponed until May 21. The purpose of the postponement is to make some arrangements to be perfected.
