HE SPEAKS FOR THE SOUTH

SOUND ARGUMENT BY SENATOR WALSH

The South is destined to be the Great Manufacturing Section and Wants Tariff Reform—For Free Silver and Income Tax.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—In the Senate today Senator Pat Walsh of Georgia, speaking to the tariff bill, said: "The South is destined to become the greatest manufacturing section of the United States. In this light it would be an act of supreme folly for her representatives to commit themselves to any legislation that would be destructive of manufacturing interests. The greatest possibilities for Southern development are in the utilization of the dormant wealth that lies in her water powers, her virgin timber, her coal and iron her cotton and other raw materials, essential to the upbuilding of large manufacturing interests. Hence the absurdity of charging that the South is seeking to destroy the manufacturing industries of the country, and the wages of labor in urging this tariff reform legislation. No such unworthy motives actuate the Southern people."

The course of the Senators on the other side in delaying every item of this bill deceives nobody. Their purpose is plain, and cannot be veiled behind pretensions of sympathy for the various interests affected by the amendments which have been debated. With few exceptions these interests have been trifling compared with the tremendous interests affected by the delay in the passing of the bill, and the people everywhere who are clamoring for the settlement of this question in order that the business of the country may proceed, know full well that the Republican party is to blame for the delay in its enactment. The object of the Republicans is known of all men.

"The Republican Senators know that the passage of the Wilson bill will inaugurate an era of prosperity and growth in this country and a revival of business throughout the land that will be disastrous to Republican hopes. To escape this they wish to postpone the passage of the bill until after the approaching elections, or until a date so close to that time as to make it impossible for the improved conditions to be felt before the elections.

"The people are not theorizing. They are hungry in the midst of plenty, they are unemployed in the home of progress and development. They are the victims of a condition which is the natural result of a policy that the Republican party is responsible for, and the return of which they are now opposing by artifice and every method of delay known to the parliamentary tactician. By the theory that shutting out competition from other countries will protect our home market for our home people, the McKinley tariff has excluded millions of dollars' worth of goods, for which our own products would have been exported in payment, and just in proportion as others have been crowded out of our own goods have been shut out, and every million of bushels of wheat being fed to hogs, which, under a tariff tariff, would have found a profitable market abroad."

Senator Walsh announced himself as in favor of the income tax, and quoted from a speech of Senator Sherman as follows: "Here we have in New York Mr. Astor, with an income of millions derived from real estate, accumulated year after year, by mere family pride of accumulation, and we have alongside of him a poor man receiving $1000 a year. What is the discrimination of the law in that case? It is altogether against the poor man. We tax his clothing, we tax his consumption. By the laws of nature, the laws of heat and cold, of hunger and thirst, it requires as much to feed the poor man as it does the rich man. No more dollars need be drawn from the coffers of Mr. Astor to supply his natural wants than are needed to supply the wants of the poorest man in New York, except as to quality; and yet our national taxes are upon consumption, and not upon property. . . . We tax every little thing that is imported from abroad. Everything that he consumes we call a luxury and tax it, and yet we are afraid to touch the income of Mr. Astor. Is there any justice in it? Is there any property in it? Why, sir, the income tax is the only one that tends to equalize these burdens between the rich and the poor."

Senator Walsh then said: "Admit that Senator Hill's claim is correct that the 100,000 property holders of New York city pay all the municipal, county and State taxes that are levied. Why do they pay them? Is it a generous act of public spirit on their part? No; it is because they hold all the property, and these 1,700,000 toilers have nothing on which to be taxed under a just system of an ad valorem taxation. When, therefore, the State, county and city governments refrain from imposing burdens on these laboring classes who are without property, is the Federal government justified in a system of taxation which practically exempts the rich and draws its largest revenues from the poor? If these toiling masses have nothing which the State, county, or city can tax, is it not a reason why they should be exempt also from Federal taxation, rather than a reason why they should carry the weight of the national burden? And if the State, county and city governments lay their hands on the property of the rich, because their wealth makes it proper for them to support these governments, is it not equitable and just that the riches of the nation should bear the burdens of national taxation also, instead of putting them upon the shoulders of the toiling millions, and thus always keeping them poor?"

Senator Walsh then made a strong argument for the free coinage of silver and the removal of the tax on State banks, and concluded his speech as follows: "Mr. President, the Democratic party have confidence in the administration of President Cleveland. The people of the South admire him for his integrity and his ability. They differ with him on the question of free coinage of silver, but they respect the honesty of his convictions in this, and his courageous devotion to duty in all things. They honor him for that exalted patriotism which, in the discharge of the responsible duties of his great office, rises above the prejudices of section and the clamors of party—which seeks the welfare of the people, and the best interests of the whole country."

WILL CONTINUE THE WORK.

Churches To Join in a Great Revival in Asheville.

The meetings held at the First Baptist church by Dr. Broughton awakened such a religious interest as has perhaps never been known here. Rev. J. L. White continued the service yesterday, preaching in the morning to a full house. In the evening the edifice was literally packed—the pews, gallery and aisles were filled in every available space—and more than this, it is estimated that 100 or 500 people were turned away. Mr. White preached a very effective sermon and when invitation was given those who desired prayer fully 150 went forward. About 50 responded to the request for all who had professed Christ to stand up. This meeting has awakened the Christian people that the interest awakened should not be allowed to die out, and in consequence a meeting of pastors and members of the various churches was held in the Central church study this morning. It was decided that, on account of the commencement of the Asheville Female college the latter part of this week and first of next, the union meetings would not be begun until Wednesday evening June 6. Prayer meetings, preparatory to the meeting, will be held, beginning the Monday afternoon before, in the First Presbyterian church.

At this morning's meeting committees of direction, finance and ushers were appointed. The direction committee will have charge of the work of selecting preachers for the meeting, and is composed of Revs. J. A. Branson, H. E. Christy, J. L. White and R. F. Campbell. The finance committee is composed of F. L. Willis, chairman, J. E. Dickerson, W. A. Blair and P. Stukekather. The committee on ushers is made up of the ushers of the various city churches.

RAN INTO A LANDSLIDE

THE TRAIN GOING A MILE A MINUTE

The Engineer and Fireman Killed; The Express Messenger Injured A Terrible Collision—Crushed and Burned

COLUMBIANA, Md., May 28.—The New York and Pittsburgh express on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad which left here at 11:30 yesterday morning, was wrecked near Pine Grove, two and a half miles east of Rockwood, Pa.

The coaches were well filled with passengers and the train was running at the rate of 60 miles an hour. Suddenly, without a moment's warning, the engine dashed into a large landslide, sending the engine in a twinkling down into the creek where it still lies. The combination mail and express and the regular express cars crashed into the engine with terrific force, and in a few minutes were jammed together, but did not leave the track. None of the passengers were injured.

As soon as the train quieted from the concussion, the passengers rushed to the piled up and burning express cars, where they found Messenger Stohl of the United States express company, struggling to escape from his car. In a moment he was rescued. But he had received serious injuries, but it is thought he will recover.

The passengers then turned their attention to the derailed engine below in the creek and were horrified to find no signs of the engineer or his fireman. For five hours they continued their search until at last they found the crushed and dead body of Fireman Rineford under the locomotive. One of his feet was entirely burned off. Continuing their search, they came across by itself the remains of the unfortunate engineer, Nicholson. These they gathered up, and placed in a locker, the rest of his body having been entirely consumed by fire.

All traffic was suspended for five or six hours.

MUSEUM ADDITIONS

A Chicken Without Legs, And Two Queer Guinea EGGS

The Citizens' museum editor has today received several rare specimens to be added to the collection. The rarest was brought in by C. B. Deaver, who has lately returned from Trinity college, Durham. It is nothing less than a chicken without legs. It was hatched by a hen belonging to a colored man in Durham and lived only eight days. In the same brood of chickens, Mr. Deaver says, there was one that was able to crawl at the age of two weeks. The legless chicken is preserved in alcohol and can be seen in the museum.

C. W. Baird, the West End grocer, has sent in two guinea eggs that have the natural coloration of chickens. Mr. Deaver says, there was one that was able to crawl at the age of two weeks. The legless chicken is preserved in alcohol and can be seen in the museum.

The proceeds will go to the Free Kindergarten and the grand stand and bleachers should be filled.
