THEY SWALLOW MORGAN AND THE BOLTING HAS ALREADY BEGUN

In Fact It Began Before the Convention Was Fairly Under Way - Rip Roaring Republican Gathering, Unharmonious and Rattled.

LEGISLATURE T. H. WEAVER, V. S. Lusk. SHERRIFF-JESSE M. MORGAN. CLERK-W. H. WILSON. REGISTER-FRANK A. FANNING. TREASURER-W. GREENWOOD. CORONER-DR. J. H. WILLIAMS. SURVEYOR-A. A. HAMLET.

The Republicans of Buncombe were split into two warring wings when they got together at noon today for their nominating convention.

One of the prettiest rows in the history of Western North Carolina politics was on and nobody seemed to know how to go about doing anything to bring about even a show of harmony. The convention was a mixture of Republicans, Democrats who claim to be "independent," and Third Parties of Populists.

The split was on the question of nominating a man for sheriff, and through this the trouble was as to fusion or no fusion with the Populists. Jesse M. Morgan the ex-Democrat and the man who is for fusion, was head of one wing as candidate for sheriff and Leicester Herren was leading the others as his opponent for the nomination.

Morgan was backed by the Ivy Morgans, especially John P., and Herren had such men as Chief of Police Harkins, with W. H. Weaver and other town Republicans moving heaven and earth as far as they could, for his nomination.

Last night and this morning before the convention were spent in futile efforts to make the two wings flop together. The forces met separately by last night and planned their line of action, and this morning they met jointly in a hall on Patton and caucused in an attempt to reach some agreement. They might just as well have saved their breath, however, as they failed to do any cementing, and if anything only widened the breach—each wing wanted the other to withdraw from the fight, and there it was. As Harkins put it afterwards, the wings merely agreed to disagree and broke up in a row.

Later Pritchard, Major Rollins, H. G. Ewart and other Republicans were anxious for harmony, and they had taken off their coats and worked for it, but without success.

The Convention Opens. The Republican county convention was called to order at noon today by W. W. Rollins, chairman of the county committee, and C. B. More, secretary, read the formal call for the convention.

The chairman announced that the first business would be the appointment of committees on credentials and permanent organization. On motion of R. B. Roberts the chair appointed a committee of five on permanent organization.

On motion of G. W. Cannon each township was requested to name a member of the committee on credentials.

Secretary C. B. Moore called the townships to see how many were represented. When Lower Hominy was reached the delegation asked permission to retire from the convention. This action was taken by the Hominy delegation by a unanimous vote, the occasion being the determination of the convention to endorse Jesse Morgan, "independent," for sheriff. Lower Hominy was in favor of a straight Republican candidate for sheriff, in the person of their neighbor, Leicester Herren.

Ewart Speaks. There were cheers from just about seven delegates and very mild cheers at that, when H. G. Ewart of Hendersonville was called on to make a speech and appeared on the speaker's stand. His speech was mainly in defense of the idea of fusion and in abuse of county government, and he "jolted" the Populists very prettily. Ewart's chief argument in favor of the Populists in North Carolina was that when they held their State convention at Raleigh not long ago the cheering could have been heard for blocks. "They were good citizens," he said, "and not lawless without clients or farmers without families, and the Republicans need not be afraid of treachery if they join hands with them."

The ex-Congressman was defiant in talking of Democratic speech-making the Ninth district, and he vowed with avenging solemnity that he would not agree to let a Democrat speak in the district without a division of time being demanded. Ewart evidently saw the drift of things in the Herren-Morgan row, for at the close of his speech he advised his brethren that they had better risk blasted hopes in this respect than to lose the legislature. Then with another off-color story that took admirably well he quit.

Pritchard Appears. It was Jeter C. Pritchard's turn now and the way he proceeded to pound Republicanism into the delegates was a reminder of old times. Pritchard's idea of it was that every good citizen in Buncombe considered it a laudable ambition just now to beat the Democracy, no matter how it was achieved. Pritchard ranged from sheep to sugar and from brandy to roosters in his rambling discourse about Democracy. He waxed eloquent in declaring that the Democratic party of the Ninth district had no platform and that it would be as easy as dirt for Pearson to abuse Crawford on this account.

He said personal abuse and persecutions are heaped by Democrats on those few men who have left the party, and he showed a great sympathy for the class of men. Pritchard's advocacy of fusion was less pronounced than Ewart's, but his sympathy for the deserters was a straw in this direction.

Pritchard declared that he understood that the whiskey trust had contributed $500,000 to North Carolina politics, much of it to be disbursed by Asheville office holders.

Credentials Committee. The report of the committee on credentials showed that all the townships were represented except Lower Hominy and Avery Creek. The delegation from the latter township were on hand, but they had no "credentials" according to the report, and a vote of the convention was necessary to let them in.

On report of the committee on permanent organization W. W. Rollins was made permanent chairman of the convention and C. B. Moore and J. B. Sumner secretaries. Rollins protested that it was an unexpected honor, but there was no reason to think he meant this seriously.

Fusion with the Populists, or "Coalition," as Rollins called it, was the theme on which the chairman spent 20 minutes addressing the convention. Beginning at the bottom of the ticket and going up the convention first nominated a coroner. Several names were suggested, Dr. W. D. Hilliard, Dr. A. M. Ballard and Dr. John H. Williams being the candidates. The first ballot resulted in Dr. Williams being nominated by 45 votes to Ballard's 14. Hilliard having nothing whatever to show that he was in the race.

Surgeon. A. A. Hamlet of Jupiter, was nominated for surgeon by acclamation.

Treasurer. For treasurer Washington Greenwood of Big Ivy and J. M. Hawkins of Acton, were placed in nomination. Greenwood was nominated by a vote of 40 to 18 on the first ballot.

Register of Deeds.

Interest increased when the office of Register of Deeds was reached. W. J. Beechboard of Flat Creek was nominated by James Marr, and F. A. Fanning of Asheville was named by H. L. Guldger. Byron Reeves of Home was also placed in nomination, but the fight was between Fanning and Beechboard, Asheville going solid for Fanning. When the second ward was called E. T. Belote announced three votes for Fanning, but R. S. Ball hopped up with a muck look and declared that this was dead wrong.

"We have two votes for Beechboard," he said, "and we don't intend to submit to this sort of thing."

Ball's kick was quickly shut down, however, by force of strength, and Fanning was nominated by a vote of 37 to 35, as against Beechboard's 20 and Reeves's 1.

Clerk of Superior Court.

Three names were offered for clerk of the Superior court. J. A. Harris wanted the convention to endorse by acclamation the candidacy of W. H. Wilson of Swannanoa, an independent Democrat, but the other names were brought forward to head this off. These were W. M. Jarvis of Asheville and H. A. Luther of Upper Hominy. Wilson was nominated by a vote of 39 to Luther's 6, and Jarvis's 12. This was a sample of fusion.

Now came the question of the nomination of sheriff, and there was a perceptible buzz of new interest in the hall. James T. Myers moved to endorse Jesse Morgan, while P. L. Love, an Asheville colored man presented the name of Wm. Jarvis as a man who could bring the two warring wings together and carry the day. E. T. Belote declared according to the nomination of Jarvis that this seemed the best way to avert the trouble that seemed brewing.

William Henderson of Leicester made a similar plea, but Prof. Lipscomb argued that they were mistaken, and that Morgan alone could bring them together—a statement which people seemed to doubt.

Herren's name was brought up in a quiet way, and H. L. Guldger followed him in a fiery speech demanding that the convention nominate Morgan.

Then Mr. Herren's man got to his feet, and showed that the angel of peace had been at work with some degree of success, by announcing that he would withdraw his name. This was a surprise all around, and for a moment the convention was thunderstruck by the thought of having no fight.

At the same time somebody withdrew the name of Jarvis and it looked like harmony for a second, but some anti-Morgan men immediately insisted hotly that the withdrawal of Jarvis was not authorized and were on the point of demanding a roll call when Jarvis himself announced that the withdrawal was straight.

Then, with a smile of rare radiance, Mr. Rollins put a motion to make Morgan's nomination unanimous. This vote was carried amidst great cheers, and Morgan's candidacy went on record as being endorsed.

V. S. Lusk was named without a dissenting voice as one of the candidates for the legislature, and T. H. Weaver was chosen, after four ballots, as his running mate.

TOBACCO SEASON STARTED.

There is a Light Crop in Western N. C. This Year.

Tobacco men were surprised a day or two ago when the first of the season's tobacco was brought to the city to be sold. This established a new record, as the season does not open as a usual thing until much later. None of the outside buyers have as yet come to Asheville.

The first break was secured by Carter's warehouse on Patton avenue. The tobacco was primings of the new crop, and was brought in by J. P. Lewis of Haywood. Prices averaged first rate, from 10 to 14 cents being paid.

It is said in warehouse circles that this year's crop of tobacco will not pan out as heavily as those of former years. The acreage in Western North Carolina is said to be not more than 60 per cent. of the usual size, and although the yield is fairly good the amount of tobacco will be considerably decreased on this account. The shortage is accounted for by the facts that the freeze in March killed many of the plants and in May and June, when the growers were about to reset their plants the dry weather was against them and caused many to plant corn instead.

There will be three warehouses in Asheville this season, so far as settled, the Banner, Farmers' and Carter's. Regular sales will not begin for some time.

THE FIGHT IN ASHLAND A BIG VOTE WILL BE POLLED TODAY.

It Is a Primary Election, and Even Some Republicans Have Voted—The Women are Praising and Working Hard in Other Ways.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Sept. 15.—The women who have made a most noble fight during the campaign against Breckinridge gave a last appeal in the local press here this morning and today at 10 o'clock they met with the ministers in Morrison chapel to offer up prayer for Breckinridge's defeat.

The following is a sample of the many small cards issued by them this morning: "To the men of the Ashland district: We, wives, mothers and sisters of many of the voters of the Ashland district, appeal to you to help us win this fight against Breckinridge. It is a fight of virtue against vice, and we appeal to the brave men of this glorious old district to help us win this fight and we will pledge ourselves to go on from this to other equally useful victories, and in a short time we will free our lovely city from the curses which now endanger our beloved ones—the saloon, the corner grocery, the houses of scarlet women, the gambling halls and the race tracks—and will redeem the fair name of our city and of our district."

FRANKFORT, Ky., Sept. 15.—The election is passing off quietly. No difficulties of consequence have occurred. But four men are known to have been challenged up to this time. The poll of the town at 10 o'clock shows 397 votes to have been cast and 323 of these were for Owens. A full vote is being polled. The Owens men here are confident and hard at work. The Breckinridge men seem demoralized.

11:30 a. m.—There is much excitement at many of the voting places. Some Republicans have voted. Specials from all points indicate that Owens is running ahead more than was expected.

STATE HEALTH CONFERENCE. It Was in Session in Salisbury—Papers and Discussions.

SALISBURY, Sept. 14.—The health conference, the first of the series of the triennial sessions agreed upon by the State Board of Health to be held in the State each year, convened here today. There were about 200 persons present at the opening of the morning session. The conference met in the opera house and was called to order by Dr. Henry T. Balmann of Salem, president of the State Board.

A paper was then read by Dr. S. Westray Battle of Asheville on "Prevention of Tuberculosis (consumption) as we know it today," followed by a paper by Geo. G. Thomas of Wilmington on "Quarantine and Disinfection in Relation to Contagious Diseases." Both papers were fine and instructive. Questions were invited and freely asked by the audience and much that was interesting and edifying was brought out.

Dr. R. H. Lewis read a dissertation on "Drinking Water in Relation to Malarial Diseases." He was followed by Dr. H. T. Balmann on "The Pollution of Drinking Water and its Detection." Questions were again freely asked and much valuable information gained. The subjects at tonight's session were "The Water Supply of Salisbury" and "An Instructive Epidemic of Typhoid Fever."

The interest taken in the conference will give an impetus to the work in the State. Quite a number of physicians from the surrounding counties were present. The next conference, your correspondent learned from Dr. Battle, will probably be held in Charlotte in January.—Charlotte Observer.

CARR DIED LAST NIGHT.

The Wound He Received in Macon Proved Fatal.

News of the death of Charles Carr was received last night in a telegram to John O'Donnell. Carr is the man who left Asheville two weeks ago and was shot yesterday morning in Macon, Ga. The telegram came about 10 o'clock, and announced that Carr died at 7:45 p. m. No further particulars of the shooting were received.

Frank and John O'Donnell, brothers-in-law of the dead man, had left for Macon when the telegram came. They hoped to reach there before Carr's death. Carr was known to his Asheville friends as a man of quiet and peaceable disposition and his death is a great shock to them.

THE CIGAR TRADE.

A New Field for Labor Opened by the New Tariff Law.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Secretary Carlisle is preparing to carry into effect section 9 of the new tariff law for the manufacture in bonded warehouses of materials imported and manufactured for export. The new law enlarges the class of goods that can be so manufactured in bonded warehouses. Among the more important articles is tobacco. A great impetus has been given, it is said, to the cigar trade by this new provision of the tariff law and a new field for labor, and it is estimated that 10,000 people will be given employment in different large American cities.

The Bank of England, Dividend.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—The semi-annual meeting of the directors of the Bank of England was held today. Mr. David Power, the governor of the bank, announced a slight decrease in the dividend, which was due to the low value of money. The liabilities of the bank have been reduced to £2,481,985.

Praise for North Carolina.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—The report of Lieut. F. H. Tyler, who was ordered by the navy department to attend the evolutions of the North Carolina naval militia, indicates the remarkable utility and improvement of that body.

On The Up Grade.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: Business has met no set back this week, and continues larger than early in August, and larger than a year ago directly after the panic.
