a meeting last week at which they clamored for a high tariff on their product, so that foreign wool may be excluded and the prices of the raw article and all woolen goods as well advance. These gentlemen must have forgotten that one of the things decided by the last election is that it is wicked to legislate any value into anything-more especially into silver; and that it is impossible to do it anyway. Thus we were told that if a free coinage bill passed, the silver mine owners would make untold billions, while at the same time the impossibility of legislation increasing the value of silver was demonstrated time and again. A Story of Buncombe County From the New York Sun.

"In Buncomb: County," by Maria What is Going on in the Real Estate Louise Pool (H. S. Store & Co.), is an account of the adventures of two Eas: ern girls, while on a visit to a farm | Register Mackey's office: among the North Carolina bills. Both place and people are described with a great deal of quaint bumor and no small amount of literary skill. While the book would be improved by some judicious pruning among the first hundred pages, the story of "Ristus," the episode of the wedding of Black Jake and Sally, and the history of the transaction in counce tion with "thur Case hoss" are all excellent, and are woven by Miss Pool into a very delightful story.

Providential.

From the Monroe Journal. A stranger came to town last ? hurs day night and camped in Stute's lot. He went and got a friend to hold prayer meeting in the lot for the benefit of the campers. On the way they rememberd that neither had a Bible and were at a loss to know what to do. When they came to the lot they saw a negro acting suspiciously with a valise, and when they approached him he dropped it an ran. On opening the valise they found a Bible among other things in it. Their wants were supplied. The meeting was
