Washington, Jan. 23.-Enormous rowds were present today to witness the opening of the debate in the Roberts case. Fully three-fourths of the spectators were women. They occupied the reserve galleries tier and their bright gowns illuminated the gloom of the cavernous recess about the spacious hall. The diplomatic gallery alone was a yawning chasm. Roberts was in a seat on the right

Attractive Display

Coke Dandruff Cure Window at Dr. Smith's Drug Store.

Many passers-by are attracted by the novel and artistic display of the Coke dandruff cure and hair tonic in Dr. T. C. Smith's drug store window. The centerpiece consists of a cave constructed of coke to symbolise the name. At the rear of the cave is a handsome mirror, having the name of the preparation etched on it. On top and at the sides are some very attractive pictures, the latest thing in their line from Paris. The pictures are in two parts, the picture proper being cut out and attached to a background of some solid color, giving a very clear-cut and pretty effect. The pictures were secured by the Coke company's agent at the Paris exposition, who achieved distinction by being the first exhibitor from the United States to secure space at the exposition.

The window display is the work of Frank S. Smith.-Asheville Citizen, January 17.
