EXCELS IN HEIGHT AS WELL AS VIEW

Our Big Bargain Sale this month should not be missed. Unusual values await you.

While panoramic beauty of view and not altitude is one of the chiefest attractions of Overlook Park, it will interest many to learn that the park on the heights around Asheville excels the noted Lookout Mountain, at Chattanooga, with which it has been compared as much in the latter respect as in the former. True the view from Lookout Mountain is a fine one, a wide stretching area of river and plain and that it rises high above the city at its foot but its utmost top is on a level only with that of the Square of Asheville. Overlook Park is 660 feet above the top of Lookout Mountain and its view commands not only stretches of river and valley but vast and mighty mountains far and near, the Crocy on the east and Pisgah mountain and the ranges of the Balsam and Smokies in the west and the main chain of the Blue Ridge to the south.

In the clear atmosphere of the last few weeks the beacon lights which shine from the buildings of Overlook and make the semblance to a huge for miles and people from the border line of the county report that they can see the bright electric from their homes. The music from the pavilion is sometimes wafted cityward but most people prefer to watch it at nearer range where they can see the pictures and the lights of the city from the tower of the restaurant on the portico.
