Gloom Lies Thick In The Haunts of The N. Carolina Machine

(By TAV.) WASHINGTON, May 13.—There is a funeral gloom in the haunts of the North Carolina republicans who camped on the trail of the federal appointment which they failed to land. The places that knew them once, know them no more. They have vanished, vanquished and shamed. Before they left some of the bitter spirits expressed themselves in rather free fashion when discussing their "throw down" from Brother Taft.

Mr. Settle There. A recent arrival at the national capital is the Hon. Thomas Settle of Asheville, N. C., who himself cut no small figure in the recent contest for the judgeship. He was regarded as a strong factor in the race and it is stated here and there that had he lived in the Eastern district of the state, he would have been nominated by the president. Mr. Settle stands high in favor at the white house and, as recently stated in one of my letters, he is in line for a good office. I have it on excellent authority that Mr. Settle was offered a diplomatic position about some weeks ago, but he declined it for reasons best known to himself.
