TERRIBLE "DOPE" STORY COMES TO ASHEVILLE

IF YOU ARE "GROUCHY" EXPECT APPENDICITIS.

Traveling Man from Norfolk Tells of Theory Emanating from Johns Hopkins University.

If there are any Ashevilleites who have a "grouch" they had better look out for appendicitis. This is the latest tip to reach this section from that noted temple of medicine—Johns Hopkins university at Baltimore.

Whether or not any members of the Asheville medical profession agree with this theory, just advanced, is not known, but "doctors often disagree" and under such circumstances "disciples may go free."

B. R. Knight, who sells fertilizers out of Norfolk is the one who brought to Asheville yesterday, from what he claims to be the portals of Johns Hopkins university, this "grouch for appendicitis" theory. He also brought to Asheville with him a copy of a newspaper published in his home town by the sea, which contains a story of the announcement that people who are prone to be grouchy had better look to their appendices, or, as some call them, appendices. So if you have deep furrows growing on your brow, if your lips have a downward trend and your eyes squint—if you are sore on the world and care "nothing for nobody nowhere"—be wary, you are showing all symptoms of this rather high-tone disease approaching. Its the bottle of ether and the knife for you, for you'll be in for some cutting.

Now, here is the story, in part, from the Norfolk paper, which Mr. Knight seemed yesterday to be delighted to show to all of those who appeared to be "sore on the world."

Read it:
"Of course, the Hopkins man says, improperly masticated food and eating combinations, such as would make an ostrich balk, are also responsible for appendicitis, but worry and a general pessimistic feeling is largely responsible. All the men and women whose disposition make hard lines in their faces are feeling their right sides to see if the 'germ' has yet started them on the operating table and of a painful separation of their treasures, but unfashionable, appendix and incidentally to a goodly part of their bank roll.

"If you would fight off appendicitis," says the appendix snatcher, "smile and you need never wake up from another sleep minus the useless bit of tissue. Train your eyes to twinkle and the corners of your mouth to a 45 per cent. grade upwards, no matter if you have to walk the floor all night with a screaming baby and all the furniture in the room rushes out to greet your ankles. The people who can learn to smile under the most adverse conditions are least subject to the disease. A good way to practice this character of fortitude is to greet your mother-in-law with open arms and a smacking kiss when she comes to your home to spend a couple of months. The shock may kill the dear old lady, but it's good practice."

"No grouch knows how to eat properly. He comes to the table scowling, scowls at the food, scowls at the service and scowls when he comes to paying his board bill. The latter scowl is often a pardonable sin. He dislikes to smile and consequently avoids dining with companions who try to make him think the world is a jolly good place in which to work and live. This constant growling is quickly communicated to his internal workings with the result that his poor little appendix goes off on a tear and then there's a hurry call to the bathroom.

"But the fellow who makes a dinner a conversational delight for himself and a few friends or for his family can, according to the noted surgeons, eat what his palate craves without worrying about what the lancet wielder will charge him for a few deft cuts. Despite the fact that you pretend to envy the man who tells you in a superior manner about the removal of his appendix, way down deep somewhere you are supremely satisfied with the one you still retain.

"For this reason the dictum of the doctors about the grouch is likely to take serious hold upon the major portion of mankind and soon it is hoped to release the chronic grouch to the limbo where he belongs and give the surgeons a vacation."

After telling this story, according to Mr. Knight, one is liable to "turn over" and ask that his "hypo" be filled preparatory for another "shot of dope."

TWO TRIBUNALS WILL BEGIN SESSIONS HERE

Two courts will commence the trial of civil dockets in Asheville this morning—the United States District court and Superior court of Buncombe county.

Judge James E. Boyd will preside in the Federal court and will be engaged until Thursday or Friday of this week on the trial of civil cases by jury, which were carried over from the May session of the tribunal.

Judge Stephen C. Bragaw will preside over the civil term of the Superior court, which will extend for a period of three weeks, or until the docket is cleared. Criminal term of this court, Judge Frank E. Carter presiding, will convene after the close of the Madison county court term at Marshall. This begins on September 1—the first Monday in next month—and will continue for probably two weeks.

"DEATH CORNERS" ARE AGAIN ESTABLISHED

After a single week of comparative peace, without worry for fear of being run down and maimed for life, if not killed, another complaint has been registered by citizens residing in the vicinity of Flint street, Starnes and Cumberland avenues with reference to joy-riders, both in automobiles and on bicycles. In other words, the "auto-speedway" in this residence section of Asheville has again been put in service, and "death corners" are again in vogue. The matter will be presented to Chief of Police Lominae today, according to certain citizens, with request that reckless riding and driving arrests be made.

BISHOP T. S. HENDERSON HEARD AT THE Y.M.C.A.

OVERFLOW CONGREGATION OF MEN AND WOMEN ATTEND.

Thomas, the Doubting Apostle, Subject of Eloquent Discourse by a Bishop of M. E. Church.

Before a congregation of men and women that overflowed the seating capacity of the large auditorium of the Methodist Episcopal church, with headquarters in Chattanooga, Tenn., yesterday afternoon delivered a powerful sermon. The eminent divine who came south just about a year ago did not take a text from the Bible but chose as the subject of his inspiring discourse Thomas, the doubting apostle. Although Bishop Henderson spoke for about an hour he held the close attention of his congregation. He is an orator with a splendid appearance and makes an impression upon his hearers from the very start.

Bishop Henderson said that the apostle, Thomas, wanted to see the marks of the nails in the hands of Him, inflamed upon the cross. This was the very keynote of the sermon, or rather heart-to-heart talk. The speaker could see in the flowers, the trees, mountains, the seas, the sun, moon and stars and everything that was of His making the marks of the nails in the hands of Jesus Christ. "And I want to say to you Christian people who are within the sound of my voice this afternoon," continued Bishop Henderson, "that I believe in America, England, Germany, France, Russia, Austria, the Balkan allies and others fail to show the marks in the hands, they cannot abide.

"I care not for the effect of the Japanese litigation, nor do I care what the people of California think of it, and I do not suppose you people of Asheville do. But I will say that unless this great country of ours—America—can show the print of the nails the Japanese will not heed the preachings of our missionaries, and I do not blame them in the least.

"I must say to you Christian people of Asheville," said Bishop Henderson, in conclusion, "that the Christian people of Asheville and this section, the worldly people, the thoughtless people, are saying to you that you must show to them the marks of the cross before you can accomplish much."

Bishop Henderson came to Asheville for the purpose of dedicating the house of worship of the Methodist Episcopal church, of which the Rev. C. B. Roach is the pastor, on North French Broad avenue. This is the building formerly used by the congregation of Trinity church. Bishop Henderson preached at both morning and evening services and was heard by large audiences. Many members of that church reside in the rural sections and could not reach Asheville in time for the morning services, neither could they remain over until night. Hence the meeting for both men and women at the Y. M. C. A. A special musical program, arranged by Secretary Ed B. Brown, was rendered. This included a selection by the Belmont Four, congregational singing, and selections by the boys' orchestra.

Secretary Brown announced that the speaker next Sunday afternoon will be Dr. O. A. Brown, of the faculty of Vanderbilt university at Nashville.

ALL KINDS OF SHIPS.

Butler Ames, of Massachusetts, has invented an airship which, so far, has spent a long, delightful time on the ground. He also owns the original yacht America. She won the queen's cup in the races between American and British yachts before the civil war. Now and then Ames takes her out of Chelsea harbor and fits her up for a short cruise.—The Popular Magazine.

JURIES REPORT IN INTERESTING CASES

Trial of Jesse Upton, Charged With Murder of Mann Brendle, Results in Inability of Jury to Agree.

News has been received here from Bryson City to the effect that Jesse Upton, charged with murdering his brother-in-law, Mann Brendle, last Christmas, has been released on bond following the failure of the jury to agree, at last week's session of the Superior court, for the trial of criminal cases, in Swain county. The case has attracted a great deal of attention in western North Carolina and the result of the trial will be learned with a great deal of interest by western North Carolinians who are familiar with the case.

The case attracted unusual attention because of the fact that Mrs. Lillian Rowe Frye, one of the few women lawyers of the state, took an active part in the prosecution of Upton. Mrs. Frye has been engaged in the practice of law at Bryson City for the past two years and her participation in the recently tried case marked her first appearance in a criminal action. Thomas S. Rollins, of this city, assisted with the prosecution, and Upton was represented by S. W. Black and T. D. Bryson.

Calro Hall, who was tried at last week's term of court, on a charge of criminal assault, was found guilty of attempted assault and was sentenced to the state prison for a term of fifteen years. This case is said to have cost Swain county over $1,000. The verdict of the jury was rendered after the jurymen had discussed the question more than a day. Assisting Solicitor Alley in prosecuting were Captain A. M. Frye and Robert M. Gantt, while the defendant was represented by T. D. Bryson and S. W. Black.
