Two Pitcher System Proven Sad Failure in Big Leagues

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—A number of blasted hopes rising up in the wake of two pennant races as moments to blow theories as these lines are pressed into type offer a most substantial and convincing argument against the practice of depending on two pitchers as the mainstay in an effort to win either a pennant or a high place in the final ranking of the clubs. The Phillies and the Senators, who are again disappointed in conclusion of the American League contest, are shining examples of the dual-pitching system, and the Athletics, who resorted to the same thing are exceptions only in the fact that they are an exceptional club in most other respects.

This has been a somewhat remarkable season for the number of clubs that tried to survive the full distance of the campaign with two men doing the bulk of the hurling. That it can't be done has been proved. McGraw, who probably has no superior in the game as a handler of pitchers, was quite correct when he recently remarked: "You can't win a pennant with two pitchers, no matter how good they are."

And McGraw, who never tried to accomplish his ends by this means, goes right on winning pennants. He probably had as much cause as any of the managers this season to rely on two slabs for the bulk of his games. Early in the season Matty and Demaree were the only men on his staff showing ability to win ball games. Treseau was very disappointing at the start, and Marquard, who had practically no spring training, was slow in rounding into form.

On the other hand the Phillies jumped away from the post in April with two men, Alexander and Seaton, in fine form and carrying the bulk of the burden between them. Charlie Doolin, who, in many respects, is a clever manager, probably figured that, with the Giants, Cubs and Pirates slumping as they were at the time, he could get his club away to such a flying start by using his two aces that he could not be overhauled later when the inevitable slump came. Had Alexander and Seaton held out as long as Doolin probably hoped they would the Phillies might yet be in the race. But they caved in under the constant strain and by that time the Giants had got well under motion and shot right past the Quakers, never to be headed. When Doolin fell back on his other twirlers they were not equal to the task of maintaining the pace without the assistance of the big two.

The Senators, who never had more than an outside chance for the pennant in their league this season after the Athletics showed they had come back into real form again, would probably have a better future before them right now for this and other seasons had Clarke Griffith not worked Walter Johnson as hard as he did. The big fellow is still winning at a tremendous rate and establishing an individual record, but is reported that he is using up the great arm that has made him one of the greatest men in the game, and some baseball men go so far as to say he will never have another big season as the result of the overwork of the past few months. With Johnson out of it Washington might as well get settled for second division spoils, as in the olden days.

There is another phase to Johnson's case which, however, does not meet with general credence. It is rumored that Griffith worked Johnson steadily in order to cause a breakdown in his great pitcher and thereby have a substantial reason for refusing to give Sir Walter the price he is expected to demand next season. There does not seem to be much logic in this statement and it is not making much of an impression. It is more probable that Griffith worked Johnson in the hope that he could land his club high up, and for no other reason.

Connie Mack was forced to resort to the use of two star pitchers in order to hold the lead in the race, but he got away with it because he has back of his slabs a club that has no superior as a hitting machine.

A Woman Taking an Affectionate Look at Herself in the Mirror.

Grace Margaret Gould, Fashion Editor of the Woman's Home Companion, presents the latest news about styles in the September number of that periodical. Miss Gould's advice to women is to dress well, but not conspicuously. She is strongly opposed to the extremes of fashion when it comes to giving suggestions and laying out plans for clothes, but as matters of interest she reports the novelties of fashion and frequently makes fun of them; as, for an example, in her article entitled "The deceitful Mirror." In which she says that she has always thought of the mirror as woman's friend, but that on further reflection she is inclined to think of it as woman's foe—a deadly, deceitful, designing enemy. How, otherwise, she asks, can we account for the way some women dress?

When a woman looks into one of those distorting mirrors that make her terribly fat she laughs and thinks what a caricature it is of herself. But, unfortunately and something equally funny is reflected there—she doesn't see the laugh in it at all. The plain truth is that woman sees herself just the way she wants to see herself. No matter how becoming a certain new fashion may be to her, the deceitful mirror wheedles her into thinking she is the most modish thing out. Miss Gould goes on in part as follows:

Take, for instance, this little scene at the veil counter of a department store. A number of young and pretty women with long slender throats are buying the latest in neck fixings, the fluff, outstanding, tulle ruff.

"Along comes a woman whose face is as round as a rosy cheeked apple and incidentally the same color. What she lacks in neck, she makes up in chin. She likes the ruffs, too, especially the very brilliant ones—in the cerise and purple shades. Her selection is the fluffiest, the biggest, the brightest, and one of the shortest, made to close and the straight under chin, or rather chin. To be sure of its becomingness she tries it on, trying it tightly about her neck. Then she takes an affectionate look at herself in the mirror. She is satisfied that at last she is stylish.

"The fact that she really looks like Mary Queen of Scots choking to death, and that the salegirl giggled, was entirely lost on her."

MOTHER

"The angels, whispering to one another,
Can find, among their burning tongues of love,
None so devotional as that of
"Mother."—POE

My mother's feeble now, and sacred tears
Impair the pale narcissus in her cheek;
In dewy syllables, they softly speak
The lyric pathos of the vanished years!
Dear Christ I would that she could live alway!
That I might see her in each rising sun,
Imprint a blessing when each toil is done,
And call her Queen of Mothers day on day!

Of light and dew, and stulle things unseen;
He fashioned her one sweet, supernatural day;
And, faith in Him, she's walked the narrow way,
In footprints of the blessed Nazarene.
Oh, that my lips with music-gems were pearled,
That I might sing, above the sinful strife,
The flawless beauty of her Christian life,
To midnight millions of the Cross-enslaved world!

Her simple life is flavored with a love,
Full-ripened in the tropics of a heart
Whose virtue is the crystal counterpart
Of all that's vestal in the Court above.
Faith-breathing letters she indites to me,
Suffused with glamor of no earthly light;
The nervous words she scarce can see to write,
Begem an arc of my eternity.

Not in the mart, where lordly women came,
Nor in the social whirl her presence seen;
But, true to self, she reigned a worshipped queen,
In the sublime democracy of home.
Gold from the crucible, her tested soul,
A rare forget-me-not, her fragrant heart;
And, in the amber of an angel's art,
Her name upon the Savior's honor roll.

The flame of anger kindled not her cheek,
For patience knew no calmer one than she;
With fervor of a born sincerity,
She loved the poor, the friendless and the meek.
With sacraments of love, in vernal years,
O'er depths of anguish, she was wont to bow,
Impress the livid lily of the brow,
And smile and is in the rain of tears!

In tireless task, upon her humble throne,
She taught the splendid majesty of toil,
That truth would never blossom from the soil
To gild fruition in the idler's zone.
She taught the jeweled principles of Right,
And pictured clear the penalties of Wrong,
That kingly Conscience, whistling into song,
Could build a heaven from the darkest night.

She used to sing, and sew my tattered clothes,
And mend the little stocking in my chair;
She taught me how to say a sweet prayer
Than mateless songsters knew, or drew-mouth rose.
Dear hands that used to tuck me in my bed!
Gray eyes, that, smiling, watches the tiny heap!
Sweet lips that kissed me in my happy sleep,
With blue-eyed fairies peeping overhead!

O Lord of Love! what paltry recompense
To such as these, do earthly children give!
Poor ingrates, in oblivious land we live,
And crucify the Spirit's gracious sense.
Of any good, we may not speak aloud,
But truthful children we have tried to be,
With earnest vision, we have dared to see
The Cross of Jesus in the low'ring cloud.

Dear widowed mother, in the Sunset Land,
With joyous word, still may we cheer her on,
Toward the portal of the sunless Dawn,
Where father waits to clasp the eager hand.

Fair book of human life that soon may close:
The pink of childhood pictured on its page,
A maiden's vow, the angel of old age,
And thro' it all, the sweetest music flows!

Ah! when the last gray leaf is turned, and o'er
The hallowed hills, the solemn shadows lend
Their purple to her flight, good Master, send
Her long-lost mate to greet her at Thy door!
And leave us not forlorn, great Comforter,
To plod, alone, the desert-trail of Time;
But light our welkin with a star, sublime,
That we may see Thy face, and follow her!

Relief for Catarrh Sufferers Now FREE

You Can Now Treat This Trouble in Your Own Home and Get Relief at Once.

How the Remedy for Catarrh Was Discovered.

THIS terrible disease has raged unchecked for years simply because symptoms have been treated while the vicious germs that cause the trouble have been left to circulate in the blood, and bring the disease back as fast as local treatments could relieve it.

C. E. Gauss, who experimented for years on a treatment for Catarrh, found that after perfecting a balm that relieved the nose and throat troubles quickly, he could not prevent the trouble beginning all over again.

On test cases, he could completely remove all signs of Catarrh from nose and throat, but in a few weeks they were back.

Careful experiments and investigations have shown that as the troubles were expelled from the nose and throat, the real cause of the disease was overlooked and in a short time the Catarrh would return stronger than ever. Mr. Gauss has gone way ahead of the ordinary methods of treatment and has provided a remedy that and immediately gives relief to the nose and throat.

Kills the Germs in the Blood

He perfected the New Combined Treatment, said to be the logical, new, scientific method. Jesse Jones, of Scranton, Penn., says that after trying many other treatments, he used this new method and—My nose is now entirely clear and free and I am not bothered by the disease any more. The New Combined Treatment is worth its weight in gold.

farewell,
And, 'neath the crumbling slab, I dreamless sleep,
With my frail body in Obvion's keep,
Where Darkness and his silent sister dwell,
Under the lindens on celestial sod,
I'll linger in the love upon me smiled;
And, as she taught me when a barefoot child,
She'll teach me there the A B C's of God!

The Kindest Man.
Lady Constance Stewart Richardson, who has come to America to dance because she is, as she puts it, "stony broke," said the other day at the Holland House:

"Some of my happiest hours have been passed in America. The Americans are the kindest people in the world. When I think of them I am reminded of George Gray.
"Everybody has heard stories of the meanest man. Well, George Gray was known as the kindest man.
"One of the stories about George J. kindness tells how a friend asked him:
"How is Biggs doing?"
"Bad," George replied. "Very bad, indeed. Poor old Biggs."
"Why, what's the trouble with him?"
"Well, you see," said George, "I've had my salary reduced on account of the hard times, and so I'll only be able to lend Biggs half as much as usual (this year for his vacation)." — St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

SUFFERED SEVERAL YEARS RELIEVED BY PERUNA

"ONE BOTTLE DID ME MORE GOOD THAN ALL OTHER REMEDIES PUT TOGETHER."

MR. JOHN N. WATKINS,
Mr. John N. Watkins, 3431 A Crittenden St., St. Louis, Mo., writes:

"Among all the greatly advertised medicines for kidney and bladder trouble there is nothing which equals Peruna. I suffered for several years with this trouble, spent hundreds of dollars on doctors and medicine and all to no purpose, until I took Peruna.
"One bottle did me more good than all the others put together, as they only poisoned my system. Peruna cured me. I used it for four months before a complete cure was accomplished, but am truly grateful to you. The least I can do in return is to acknowledge the merits of Peruna."

sent it to us entirely unasked. His statement is, "The least that I can do in return for the benefit I have received, is to acknowledge the merits of Peruna."

A great many people feel this way, and voluntarily give us the privilege of using their testimonial in spite of the fact that there are some who are prejudiced against testimonials.

Mr. Watkins' trouble was kidney and bladder disease, as he states. Just exactly what the nature of the disease was we have no means of knowing. He had, however, what the doctors called kidney disease, and he had suffered for several years with the trouble.

Naturally enough a man of his means and energy would not sit down and whine because of his trouble, but he attempted to find relief. He spent hundreds of dollars in trying to find relief. It seems that he was disappointed entirely.

At last he was induced to take Peruna. Just who called his attention to the remedy we do not know. We presume it was a neighbor who had taken it for a similar purpose. In beginning to take Peruna he states:

months, at which time he claims he was completely restored to health. It was his gratitude for good health again that led him to write the testimonial and allow us to use his portrait in connection with it.

We offer no explanation as to how Peruna affected a change in his case. The operation of medicine is mostly inexplicable. The fact that he had diligently sought relief and tried other popular remedies and began to improve as soon as he took Peruna, is evidence that cannot be disputed that Peruna did for him just what he says it did.

Naturally enough, Mr. Watkins recommends Peruna to other people similarly afflicted. If any one desired to write him and obtain further particulars they should remember to enclose a stamp for reply. Otherwise their letter may receive no attention.

Catarrh of Kidneys.
Judge C. J. Park, R. F. D., Greensboro, Greene Co., Ga., writes:
"For a long time I was troubled with catarrh of the kidneys and after taking Peruna I feel like a new man."
Those who object to liquid medicines can now procure Peruna Tablets.
