Two Hostile Machines Destroyed by British Airmen During Raid.

RAIDERS FIND THAT BRITISH ARE READY

Were Headed for London but Defenders Drove Them Away.

LONDON, Aug. 13.—Two of the German machines which yesterday evening raided the English southeast coast waterways were destroyed by British naval aircraft. The official statement issued by the government today says that one of the machines was a Gotha airplane and the other a seaplane.

Two airplanes destroyed. The admiral's statement said: "One hostile airplane of the Gotha type was destroyed during the return of the raiders to the Belgian coast, and one hostile seaplane was destroyed off the coast of Flanders at approximately the same time. A large number of naval machines engaged the other raiders over the sea without decisive result.

"The pilot who destroyed the Gotha and who was flying in a land machine, reports that he first pursued an enemy airplane flying at 12,000 feet from North Foreland to about fifteen miles off Zeebrugge, where he lost the hostile aircraft.

"Returning to the mouth of the Thames he observed anti-aircraft fire bursting in the vicinity of South End and he flew in that direction, climbing, he then observed eight Gotha airplanes followed by four British machines steering northeast. The enemy machines were about 3,000 feet above him when he first saw them. He pursued, climbing to 13,000 feet, and attacked without result, when about thirty miles out to seaward.

"At this moment he saw a single hostile machine 4,000 feet below the enemy formation, but flying with it. He attacked from the front and drove the enemy down to the water where he observed him turn over and saw one of the occupants hanging on to the tail. He thereupon threw him his lifebelt and saw three circuits round him before returning to England. While returning he endeavored to communicate the position of the hostile machine to British destroyers."

"Another official statement issued this evening: "The reports of our pilots show conclusively that the enemy aircraft formation which attacked the eastern counties yesterday was making for London. On sighting the large number of our airplanes which were sent up against them they turned abruptly and made their way out to sea again, dropping some bombs on postoffice department announced that published reports of blanket exemption for this class of postal employees were based on a misinterpretation of the department order covering postal exemptions. Only scheme clerks, chief clerks and assistant chief clerks of the railway service will be given exemptions and most of them are above military age.

The postoffice department announced also that it would certify exemptions for postoffice inspectors but not for postmasters. Postmasters of the first, second and third classes however, are exempted specifically under the law.

It developed today that the navy department, misunderstanding the war department ruling as to voluntary enlistment of registered men, had instructed its recruiting officers to accept registrants into the navy even if they had been called before their local boards for examination. The mistake quickly was corrected, recruiting stations being told by telegraph that no man called for examination under the draft law could be accepted into any branch of the military or naval service as a voluntary recruit. Until called, however, registrants are free to enter the army, navy or marine corps.

Plans to provide publicity facilities at camps or the national army and the national guard are to be left entirely to the discretion of the camp commanders, who will be authorized to permit newspaper correspondents and established officers within the camp limits and to maintain private telegraph or telephone lines there if deemed advisable. No such privileges will be granted, until the camps actually are established and the commanders on the ground.

FOUR ACCEPTED AND SEVENTEEN REJECTED

City Board Turns Down Four Times as Many Men as Are Passed.—No Examinations Today.

Only four men were accepted and seventeen were rejected by physicians working under the direction of the Asheville city board of examinations, yesterday. The board, continuing its work of re-examining men, turned away four times as many as it approved.

The seventeen rejected will not be called to undergo any more examinations. As far as the city board is concerned, they have been disappointed for the last time. All underwent two or more examinations, in the effort to qualify some of them for service in the new national army.

Those who failed when examined last week, but who were passed by the examiners yesterday, were men holding the following numbers: 1179, 1616, 1781, 430.

Those rejected held the following serial numbers: 218, 753, 163, 1635, 350, 2405, 297, 704, 814, 1064, 1625, 1179, 1810, 288, 2219, 365.

No men are to be examined today, according to a statement made last night by J. A. Nichols, secretary of the board. It is probable that the work of passing on the exemption claims already filed will begin tomorrow morning. Those men accepted yesterday have ten more days in which to prepare and file their proof, provided they are desirous of entering a claim for exemption.

The number of affidavits filed with the board, was materially increased by the addition of several filed yesterday.

HIGH COST OF LIVING CUT BY BOYS AND GIRLS

ASHEVILLE BOYS AND GIRLS GROWING FINE CROPS. Crops Will Replac Labor Twenty Times in Back Yard Gardens in Asheville.—Inspection Made.

After seeing seven of the twenty-one sections of backyard and vacant lot gardens cultivated by more than 600 Asheville boys and girls, under the direction of Halston Fleming, an observer said yesterday that the result of the venture would be to reduce materially the high cost of living, and at the same time was an educational scheme that would be invaluable to the school children in years to come.

In the seven sections visited were forty-seven different plots cultivated by as many boys and girls of ages varying from eight or nine years to sixteen years. Crops of fine corn, Irish potatoes, collards, squash, pumpkins, cabbage and tomatoes were found growing in flourishing condition, and it was evident that much time and attention had been bestowed on each plot, in some sections fresh dirt giving signs of recent labor with hoe and mattock.

It was variously estimated that the crops produced on each plot would repay the time and labor expended at least twenty times over. More industrious children had taken advantage of the seasons, and had by harvesting their first crop at the earliest possible time been able to plant a second crop on the same land, thereby gaining twofold over the usual product of a piece of land in a single season. Plots growing a second crop were invariably superior in method of cultivation to the first, showing that the individual worker had taken great pride in "making two blades of grass grow where one grew the preceding year."

In keeping with the nation-wide scheme of greater production on account of the war crisis and high prices of food, the gardens had undergone the most intensive and careful cultivation, every food of available ground being used to add to the total volume. A lady, a visitor from south Georgia, who was a member of the party "taking in" the gardens, spoke enthusiastically of the work of the boys and girls.

One of the largest sections visited, that behind the temporary home of the high school on Broadway, contained every variety of vegetable known to the average housekeeper's table. The plots in this section were distinctly marked out, the first encountered being what were true double plots, cultivated by the larger boys and girls of the high school. On these double plots were found thriving crops of corn, beans and cabbage. One empty plot was devoted to Irish potatoes, the healthy vines and loamy condition of the soil revealing in part the hours of labor that had been given to it by the high school boys and girls.

During the latter part of April the campaign for the cultivation of backyard plots was launched in Asheville. Up to that time, it was stated, no definite action had been taken and not a furrow turned. Heading a committee from the board of trade, Mr. Fleming organized the school boys and girls and started the work of preparing gardens. Some lagged at the start, but very soon the spirit of enthusiasm spread to each one, and the result was that in a short time many early vegetable crops were planted and under cultivation. In early midsummer these crops were harvested and sold, the returns reaching a total that surprised even the most sanguine.

The scheme of putting farming implements and garden tools into the hands of those who did not have them was put into operation last May by order from headquarters, the embryo farmers were furnished a supply of implements by hardware dealers, the entire amount being assumed by the city organization, while each boy or girl was charged with the implements individually. No stone was left unturned to give impetus to the movement and to sweep away all reasons for lagging.

Soon the garden cultivating brigades of boys and girls were given the approval and support of the city government, and the work progressed rapidly, the color and cheer in the city, too, being organized and given plots to raise their crops. At a recent session of the city commissioners, one of its members stated that an Asheville boy had realized almost $100 from the sale of vegetables from one little plot of land, and that a number of others were making equally as fine a record.

During the past few days Mr. Fleming has instituted a campaign among the gardeners to remove the remaining weeds in their plots, and it is stated, that hundreds of young fellows have responded. While it has not been announced, there has been given an intimation that the winding up of summer gardening in the fall will likely be the signal for a fine program in which the trustees of the state will be asked to take a part.

Major Patrick Henry Winston Leaves Today to Report to General Wood at Charleston.

Orders to report at once to Major-General Leonard Wood, commanding the Southeastern United States army, at Charleston, were received last night by Major Patrick Henry Winston, professor of law at the University of North Carolina, who has been spending the summer at Asheville.

Major Winston will leave this morning for Charleston. After reporting his resignation to General Wood he will be assigned to duty in the judge advocate's department of the officers' reserve corps. The orders came in the shape of a telegram from Washington.

Major Winston, who is a son of Dr. George T. Winston of Asheville, a former president of the University of North Carolina, will be granted a leave of absence for the duration of the war by the trustees of the state university. Major Winston received his commission ten days ago.
