AT THE "MOVIES"

AT THE MAJESTIC.

"The Prussian Cur" will be the attraction at the Majestic theatre again today. An added attraction was the appearance, in the picture, of Captain Horst von der Goltz, the former German spy and ringleader in the Weiland canal plot. To say that R. A. Walsh, the director and author, has made a big picture is to put it too mildly. Mr. Walsh is said to have made a colossal picture. He has not stopped with a presentation of great international events of the present, but has gone back into history for half a century. Following the dismissal of Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, the workings of the vast German spy system in America are revealed in vivid spectacular scenes. Many characters in the drama are figures of world importance. The German war lords, from the Kaiser down, appear, and President Wilson and his advisors are shown in the momentous days just preceding the declaration of war. One of the biggest sensations in the picture is the United States congress in session, discussing the outrages of Germany.

AT THE GALAX.

Norma Talmadge, who appeared at the Galax theatre yesterday, in "Her

Only Way," where she made another decided hit, will be the attraction there today. Lucile Westbrook loves Joseph Marshall, a young man in her home town. But when she returns from boarding school, she finds that her fortune has been swept away and that Paul Belmont, a wealthy man of the village wishes her hand in marriage, who promises to save her father's home. Marshall fears that Lucile will be won by the glitter of wealth and bitterly denounces her, and stung by his lack of faith, Lucile tells him that she will give her consent to Belmont's proposal and before she knows it, finds herself wedded to the other man. But amid wealth and everything that money can buy she is far from happy. Her husband openly shows attention to a fascinating widow and finally is persuaded by his new love to divorce his wife, and marry her. In addition to wrecking her own life Lucile sees in horror that they also ruin Joe's career for he has by this time forged ahead with the office of district attorney not far beyond. The divorce secured, Lucile goes home determined to have it out with Belmont. "The law cannot help you out now," she tells him and shoots. When he lies dead at her feet, she presses the muzzle to her own breast and finds peace at last. Suddenly Lucile awakes and finds herself in her own home. Belmont has arrived to get his final answer, and Joe repenting his folly, has come back. Then it is that Belmont receives his answer for without looking at him, she creeps into Joe's

"Branding Broadway"

Bill Hart is seen in evening clothes for the first time in his career. It's his best picture. He gets you from all angles with this mixture of western rough stuff, hitting the high spots of Broadway, and a pretty little romance introducing the waitress of an all-night lunch room as the heroine.

MERCHANTS NEARING QUARTER MILLION

ASHEVILLE DIVISION SELLS OVER TWICE QUOTA.

Last Week's Largest Sales Since September 1.—Total to Date Is Over $225,000.

Selling $13,963 in War Savings stamps, Asheville merchants last week scored their biggest week's work since September 1. The total of sales to date is $225,633, or $5,633 more than two and a half times the original quota of $82,000.

In a statement last night Chairman Archibald Nichols, of the Asheville Merchants' division, urged the merchants to keep up their efforts until the total reaches a quarter of a million dollars or more. "It will take some heroic work to make up Buncombe's shortage of nearly $300,000 in sales," said Mr. Nichols. "While this division is well over, the public should not be satisfied until our county is over the top to make our good record complete on war work. Individuals who have signed pledge cards and not taken them up are urged to redeem them at once."

A letter from the state headquarters of the merchants' division, Mr. Nichols says, in part: "We wish to thank you for the service you have performed as local chairman of the retail merchants' division, and also again to congratulate you on putting your town over the top. Your record and the record of your merchants reflect credit on both, and we are sure that it will be a matter of pride in after years. You have not been content with just selling your quota, but you have gone on to double this amount, and some several times the allotment."

"It is a matter of great gratification to us, and we know it is to you also, that our state division has also gone over. Regardless of this fact we will want to make the total sales as much as possible."

arms. Music arranged by Mr. Hollingsworth, the Galax pipe organist.

AT THE STRAND.

William S. Hart will appear at the Strand theatre today in his newest play "Branding Broadway." The story: Bob Sands, a cowboy, accompanied by several punchers, gallops into Whetstone, Arizona, to have a good time. They are angered to find that the town has gone dry and they proceed to tear things widely apart. But the law and order league get busy, put the cowboys to flight and capture Sands, whom they place on a train going eastward, as the best means of getting rid of him. He sees an advertisement in the paper inserted by Harrington, a railroad magnate, offering a job to a strong-minded man to keep his son out of mischief. Sands goes to New York, applies to Harrington for the job and gets it after demonstrating that he has had much experience in taming horses and men. Larry Harrington, the son, is a wild lad and when Sands starts to tame him, he has a hard time of it along the Great White Way. Larry has written several letters to Mary Lee, keeper of a restaurant, and Harrington hires a detective to wrest them from her. Sands has met and loved Mary and to be near her, he rents a room next door to her restaurant. The detective enters Mary's room and after ransacking the place, finds the letters when Mary surprises him. She gives him battle and the sounds of the struggle reach Sands, who goes to her rescue and throws the detective bodily down stairs. When he learns that the man has stolen the letters, he appropriates a mounted policeman's horse and chases the detective who is riding in a taxi. He takes the letters from the man and explanations with Larry and his father follow. Sands declares his love for Mary, and they plan to go to Arizona, where Sands has a fine ranch and where they may raise cows, and geese and everything.

INFLUENZA SHOWS MARKED DECREASE

In spite of some unavoidable exposure incident to the Christmas holidays, the health department was gratified to announce that only four cases of influenza had been reported Wednesday and seven Thursday. Of the seven which developed yesterday two were in Asheville proper. One death was reported Thursday. The health officials stated last night that the Asheville people have reason to congratulate themselves on the small number of cases reported in the past two days, but that there is danger that these records will cause over-confidence and carelessness which will produce another flare-up.
